COOLIDGE ACTS AGAINST RENT PROFITEERS

Warns That Property May Be Seized Under Massachusetts Defence Act

Acting-Governor Calvin Coolidge took steps today to stop rent profiteering.

He issued a proclamation authorizing Henry B. Endicott, executive manager of the Massachusetts Public Safety Committee, to seize property whose owners, in Mr. Endicott's opinion, charge exorbitant rentals.

The proclamation specifies buildings occupied by war workers on munitions, ships or anything directly or indirectly used for war purposes.

The Lieutenant-Governor is authorized to take this step under the Commonwealth Defence Act. It has the approval of the Executive Council.

COMMITTEE NAMED.

Mr. Endicott named the following committee to put the law into operation: George H. Lyman, Paul Revere Frothingham, John F. Stevens, William Lowell Putnam, Robert Winsor and Samuel L. Powers.

Word had come to the executive office that excessive rents were being charged in the vicinity of war work plants. Should Mr. Endicott and his committee find that this condition exists he will have the authority to seize the property if the owners refuse to put their rentals on a fair basis.

Million Affected by Order to Suspend Sunday Riding

"And He rested on the seventh day."—Genesis, ii., 2.

One and one-half million New England men, women and children are affected by a "request" of the National Fuel Administration that the public east of the Mississippi River cease using motor vehicles on Sunday to save gasoline.

The number of persons affected by this deletion of Sunday riding in passenger autos, on motorcycles and in powerboats is estimated at 1,462,537 for the six New England States.

But to these must be added the thousands of proprietors and employes of motor inns, hotels, cafes and restaurants, which look upon the Sunday motor trade as their big money maker of the week.

Also hit are the many chauffeurs of taxicabs and hired passenger cars, extra Sunday hands in garages, and others who have helped to keep the Sunday motor wheels spinning.

WILL HELP WIN THE WAR.

The Fuel Administration's "request" is practically mandatory. It puts the proposition on a patriotic basis.

That settles it for the New Englander. If he can help win the war

Marne Victory Turns Tide of War, Says Gen. Pershing

By NEWTON C. PARKE,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army in France, Aug. 28.—The allied victory which followed the smashing of the German offensive on the Marne, in which the Americans figured, "marked the turning point of the war," General Pershing declares in a general order made public today. The American commander pays a high tribute to the work of the American divisions which participated in the hottest fighting in the Marne region.

The First, Second, Third, Fourth, Twenty-Sixth, Twenty-Eighth, Thirty-Second and Forty-Second Divisions received honorable mention.

"They came to the battle field at the crucial hour of the allied cause," the general order states.

SOMERVILLE BOY RESCUED FROM OPEN BOAT

Thrilling Stories of Sea Episodes Reported on Arrival of United Fruit Liner

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 28.—Officers of a United Fruit Company's liner arriving from the tropics today told of the rescue from an open boat of John Dunn, seventeen, of Somerville, in a most exciting voyage.

While coming through the Straits of Florida a hydroplane flew over the ship at a distance of about 300 feet. The passengers saw the propeller of the machine snap and fall into the sea. The pilot righted the machine and was able to volplane to the water, where he was picked up by a patrol boat.

Sunday, as the ship passed Cape Lookout, the sea was covered with wreckage, presumably the victim of a submarine. Deck chairs, spars and oars covered the water and several barrels of oil were seen floating.

Late the next day they sighted a floating mine off the starboard bow. Officers of the ship attempted to explode it by rifle fire, but were unsuccessful.

As the ship passed Barnegate the sea for miles around was covered with gasoline.

Late last night, while off the Nantucket South Shoals, the officer on watch heard cries for help. Thinking that it might be a trick ruse, he did not answer. The cries were repeated, however, and the searchlight of the liner revealed a small open boat containing two huddled figures. A boat was put out from the ship and two youths were taken aboard. They were John Dunn, seventeen, of Somerville, and Arlo Smith, twenty, of Flint, Mich., both members of the crew of the Canadian barge Canada.

They declared that they put out out from the Canada yesterday afternoon to borrow some tobacco from another barge that was anchored near them on the shoals. The sweep of the tide was too much for them, and they were being swept rapidly out to sea without water or provi-

FRENCH CAPTURE CHAULNES; BIG GAINS BY BRITISH

Washington, Aug. 28.–More than 112,000 prisoners and more than 1,300 heavy guns have been captured by the allied forces on the Western front, General Peyton C. March, chief of staff, told newspaper correspondents at his mid-weekly conference today.

The Germans are fleeing before the victorious French in the Somme sector. The First and Third French armies are pressing the advantage fiercely. They are harassing the retreating enemy without let-up. The Germans are suffering heavy losses.

Paris, Aug. 28 (Noon).—Thirty villages, including the German stronghold of Chaulnes, have been captured by French troops in the past twenty-four hours, the French War Office announced today.

The board established a minimum wage of forty-two cents an hour for all male workers twenty-one years old and over, and thirty-two cents an hour for female workers eighteen or over. Women doing the same work as men, however, are to receive equal pay. The right of the workers to affiliate with trade unions is upheld.

BRITISH MAKE BIG GAINS ON ARRAS ROAD

By International News Service.

London, Aug. 28.—Smashing steadily forward, British troops north of the Somme yesterday took the greater part of Trones wood with many prisoners from the Prussian Guard, it is officially announced. South of the Somme British troops captured the strongly yheld town of Foucaucourt.

The first British army has improved its position astride the Arras-Cambrai road, reaching the outskirts of Haucourt, Remy and Boiry-Notre Dame.

The text of the statement follows:

"Yesterday our troops south of the Somme took Foucaucourt, which the enemy had held strongly with machine guns.

"North of the Somme we attacked and captured the greater part of the Trones wood, taking a number of prisoners, from a Prussian guard division. South of the Scarpe troops of the first army have improved their position astride the Arras-Cambrai road and have reached the outskirts of Haucourt, Remy and Boiry-Notre Dame.

"North of the Scarpe strong hostile counter-attacks were launched yesterday afternoon, along the line of the Arras-Douai railway, forcing our advanced troops back a few hundred yards to the old German trenches on Greenland Hill, where the enemy attacks broke down under our fire.

"British troops carried out a successful local operation yesterday astride the Neuf Berquin-Estaires road, advancing our line on a front of about four miles and taking a number of prisoners."

French troops have advanced all along the southern end of the Picardy battlefront. The War Office statement said that at certain points the advance had reached a depth of twelve kilometers (about seven and one-half miles).

The text of the War Office statement follows:

"In the course of the night French troops, maintaining contact with the rear guard of the enemy pursued their advance.

"North and South of the Avre we occupied Chaulnes, Omiecourt (southeast of Chaulnes), Balatre (northeast of Roye), Roiglise (slightly south and east of Roye) and Versilleries.

"To the south we penetrated Crapeaumesnil wood and captured Dives (east of Lassigny).

"This morning we continued our progress towards the Somme. We reached a general line north of the Avre, comprising Licourt, Potte, Mesnil le Petit and Nesle.

FRENCH CLOSE TO THE SOMME AND NOYON

Paris, Aug. 28.—French troops are within a mile and a half of the Somme River at one point between Nesle and Peronne, according to information reaching here this afternoon. The active battle lines is now nearly a hundred miles long running from a point northeast of Arras to the high ground directyl north of Soissons. The French line at 2 o'clock this afternoon had reached Solente, just west of Avricourt and had captured Dives Divette, part of Bois de la Reserve and had reached Divelefranc, Passel and had captured Pont Leveque, just south of Noyon.

realized in that lapse of time an advance of twelve kilometres at certain points."

By JOHN McHUGH STUART,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Paris, Aug. 28.—(1 p. m.)—Huge German forces are facing disaster as the result of the sensational advance of the French troops, under Generals Mangin and Debeney, in the vicinity of

"Since yesterday thirty villages have been retaken and we Roye and Chaulnes, it was learned by the International News Service today.

The vanguard of the French troops are now in sight of the Somme River, while the infantry and artillery of Generals Mangin and Debeney are pressing forward at all points. All of the Somme crossings are under the fire of the French artillerymen. They are being swept by a steady stream of steel, rendering the retirement of the German troops from their perilous positions extremely hazardous.

The German lines of retirement from Lassigny are under a gruelling fire, which is being concentrated upon the enemy for a distance of fourteen miles on both flanks.

The French undoubtedly are taking large numbers of prisoners in their advance, but no official figures are yet available.

HINDENBURG LINE SMASHED

The British have penetrated the Hindenburg line at a point east of the town of Heninel. This line was the final point of retreat for the Hindenburg forces in April, 1917.

Americans Hold Fismette Firmly in Face of Bitter Attacks by the Germans

By HENRY G. WALES,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the American Army on the Aisne-Vesle Front, Aug. 28.—The American forces who attacked in the region of Bazoches at daybreak yesterday are holding all the advances they scored. The line was advanced some distance and several score of prisoners taken.

Almost simultaneously the Germans attempted a strong raid on Fismette held by the Americans. Although the German artillery concentrated a terrific fire on the American positions and attempted to rake the line by machine gun fire from low flying planes the attack proved unsuccessful. Fismette remained firmly in American hands.

Debouching westwardly along the Soissons highway behind a creeping barrage, preceded by a short but intense preliminary bombardment, the Americans attacked the enemy and sought to extend their gains in the direction of Bazoches. Strong detachments of the 17th Prussian Guards division defended Bazoches and fought desperately, the struggle occasionally developing into fierce hand-to-hand combits in which the bayonet was used freely.

The Germans attempted to throw in their reserves, but these could not come up because of the curtain of fire laid down by the American artillery.

Notwithstanding the desperate fighting of the Germans the Americans advanced their lines for some distance, capturing more than fifty prisoners, including two officers and some wounded.

A few minutes after the attack to-ward Bazoches was on, the Germans pushed a strong storming party in the direction of Fismette under cover of a heavy barrage. Either it was intended to raid the American lines there or menace the American advance toward Bazoche by getting behind oh the Soissons highroad. The Americans, however, beat off the attack, no Germans reaching Fismette. The enemy left his wounded in front of the American positions.

It is believed that the Fismette attack was a demonstration and the obstinate defence of the Bazoche region was intendag to conceal the fact that the terrain between the Vesle line and the Aisne has been stripped bare.

Hindenburg Line Cut for 3 Miles at One Point, Says General March

Washington, Aug. 28.—General March, in his conference today with the newspaper men said that since his last conference the British had captured Albert and Orange Hill, and that yesterday the British had continued their drive along the Arras road for a distance of five miles. He laid particular stress on the fact that a part of the Hindenburg line had been overrun at one point for a distance of three miles. Yesterday, he said, there was extreme pressure against forty miles of the line.

The capture of Roye by the French forces has resulted in the allies gaining one of the most important railway centres on the front, General March said.

The British are making further progress east of Arras and on the Flanders front.

In Albania, General March said, the Austrians have driven the Italians back at Berat and have restored part of their lines which they recently were forced to give up.

In reponse to a question, General March said that the 31st Division is in training with the French, and that Brigadier-General F. B. Foits has been assigned as temporary commander. The 40th Division, he said, is not yet in France.

MRS. CROZIER OPENS DRIVE FOR BAND FUNDS

Mrs. Mary William Crozier, wife of Major-General Crozier of the Department of the Northeast, today began her campaign for the establishment of military bands for the United States Guards and for the posts in the Coast Defences where no bands are provided for by the government. Mrs. Crozier said: "The complete equipment for one band costs about three hundred dollars and any money contributed by the people to provide for this need would be deeply appreciated by officers and men. Any contributions, however small, will be gratefully acknowledged if addressed to me, care of Major-General Crozier, Department of the Northeast, No. 25 Dorchester avenue, or directly to me at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, Boston."

U. S. FIGHTERS PRAISED BY LUDENDORFF

By BERT FORD.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

With the British Army on the Picardy Battle Front, Aug. 28.—Anxious to stifle the concern and depression of his troops which has been caused by their recent defeats, General Ludendorff has issued another circular of assurances, a copy of which was found on a prisoner taken yesterday by the British.

General Ludendorff gives the American troops credit for great courage during their attack in the Marne sector.

The circular in part reads as follows:

"We have a feeling that in many quarters there is certain anxiety on the subject of the enemy's attacks. It is not justified if our troops are on the qui vive and do their duty. In the great mobile defensive battle on the Marne and Vesle it was on the 18th of July that the French won their real tactical success.

"ENEMY BROKE DOWN."

"During the subsequent days the French were unable, in spite of the use of a great deal of artillery, to gain any advantage of tactical significance. Although our troops were not drawn up in prepared positions, but in the open ground, all of the enemy attacks broke down with the heaviest and most serious casualties.

"Our withdrawal was not the consequence of the enemy's tactical successes, but was due to our regard for connections in the rear.

"The French and the British only attacked half-heartedly. The Americans attacked more boldly, but in close formations. The enemy owes his success on the first day to tanks, but these would not have been dangerous if our infantry had not allowed itself to be taken by surprise and if the artillery had echelonned to a sufficient depth.

PREPARE FOR DEFENSIVE.

"We are now holding, to a certain extent, very strong positions. We can await every hostile attack with the greatest confidence. As I have already pointed out, we ought to be glad if the enemy attacks because by this method he will fritter away his forces soonest.

"In defensive fighting both officers and men must be imbued with the will to conquer as in offensive fighting. This point of view must not be lost sight of. In our position, therefore, we ought not to practice offensive fighting exclusively, but also defensive warfare. The latter makes the highest demands upon our troops."

Military critics see in the last part of Ludendorff's statement a veiled realization that from now on the German army will be kept on the defensive. They believe that Ludendorff sent out these instructions to allay alarm resulting from such future tactics.

German Press Foresees Whole World Alienated; Teuton's Line Weakening

London, Aug. 28.—The German line shows every sign of weakening in the face of the allied offensive along the fifty-six-mile front from the sector north of the Scarpe to Noyon, and allied officers are eagerly watching for the slightest loophole to launch a new attack, the International News Service learned today.

Meanwhile, British papers are devoting much space to the peace bluff of the scapegoat German press.

The Berlin Vorwarts admits that Germany's danger is likely to attract friends to the allies. Herr Wolf hints that the parliament system is responsible for the failure. The News Freie Presse wants neutral pour pariers. The Cologne Gazette pleads for a "stiff upper lip" on the part of Germany fearing that Spain may join America and thereby further weaken Germany's position.

100 MEXICANS SLAIN BY U. S. TROOPS

By International News Service.

Nogales, Ariz., Aug. 28.—Commandant A. J. Abasola of the Nogales, Sonora, garrison, today has officially expressed his regret because of the fatal clash here yesterday between Mexicans and American troops.

In the street fighting, which lasted from 4:05 p. m. to 5:30 p. m., two American soldiers are known to have been killed and twenty-nine wounded. It is estimated that 100 Mexicans lost their lives.

Brigadier-General De Rosey Cabell is expected here momentarily from San Antonio, Tex., with American reinforcements. His arrival will guarantee quiet.

Captain Henry C. Caton, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

Lieutenant R. Lockwood, Nogales.

No confirmation has ben received of reports that Mayor Felix Ponolora of Nogales, Sonora, was killed in the fighting.

The battle was participated in by about 300 American soldiers and fifty civilians. Fighting started on the United States side of the international street but the Mexicans were thrown well back into their part of the town.

A military court is now in session to investigate the affair. In the meantime the popularly accepted version is that trouble arose over an attempt on the part of Mexican immigration officials to illegally pass a Mexican across the border.

Commandante Abasola declares the outbreak was due to ill feeling between Mexican and American border guards.

THORNE'S WIFE WILL FIGHT TO RECLAIM SON

New York, Aug. 28.—"Third avenue and a hundred a month look better to me than Fifth avenue and luxury. I should be more than willing to renounce this show and frippery for a good two-fisted job behind the counter. But when my husband abducted my boy he went a bit too far in his campaign of terrorism.

"Now I think I shall dethonstrate to him and his family that this is my mucilaginous hour. In other words, I am going to stick to my guns."

The pretty, good-looking woman attired in black scarcely raised her voice above its usual conversational pitch when she uttered this remarkable expression of defiance. She was in the elegant mansion at No. 9 East Seventy-sixth street, with its paintings, books and tapestries.

The speaker was Mrs. Mary Casey Thorne, wife of Joel Wolfe Thorne, banker and clubman, and son of the late Samuel E. Thorne. All day by telephone and automobile she had been directing a wide search for her three-year-old son, Joel, Jr., who has been missing since Saturday afternoon.

Helen Kerrigan, a maid, also has disappeared. Mrs. Thorne has made a police charge accusing her husband as the abductor.

The Thornes have been separated since October, 1917. This date marked, too, the official end of the romance that began in 1911, when the banker transplanted Mary Casey of Third avenue, to the exclusive circles in which his family has moved for generations.

TRIBUTE TO BRAVE MOTHERS WILL BE FEATURE OF OBSERVANCE

Heroes Day!

All Boston has given enthusiastic approval to the suggestion of the Boston AMERICAN that a day be set aside to give the people of Boston opportunity to pay reverent tribute to the Boston boys who have made the supreme sacrifice in the cause of Liberty.

Hardly was the Boston AMERICAN, ♦ considering an editorial suggestion for such a tribute on the street, when people commenced calling up the editor to voice approval and willingness to co-operate.

Fixing the day upon which this civil tribute to Boston's heroes shall occur must wait upon the return from his Summer home of Mayor Andrew J. Peters.

The Mayor is now resting at Vinal Haven, Me., but will return Labor Day. As soon as his honor arrives and finds the popular enthusiasm for the celebration he will undoubtedly issue a proclamation setting aside one day this Fall for the celebration.

Meanwhile many citizens have volunteered their services and have suggested ways in which the day may best be observed.

TO HONOR BRAVE MOTHERS.

Among these suggestions the foremost is that the mothers of Boston's brave boys who have paid the supreme price must be honored.

On that day of all days, mothers and the members of the families of the Boston heroes must receive from the city and the populace the homage that is theirs.

What form this homage will take will be decided later, but there is a general opinion that some official act of the chief magistrate should confer upon them a signal honor, lasting in its intent, to set them apart from all other mothers. Something should be done, it is suggested, to give them some permanent recognition which will endure all their lives.

Boston, in holding this Heroes' Day celebration, will be among the principal cities of the country observing such a day.

A BRILLIANT SCENE.

The scene on the Common will be a brilliant one. It will be a solemn occasion, and there will perhaps be a tinge of sadness, but all note of mourning will be absent. On the contrary the assemblage will exult in the deeds of heroism that give the day its reason for being and the city will smile through its tears.

Among those who have already sent their approval to the Boston AMERICAN are the following:

BY MAX MITCHELL, President Cosmopolitan Trust Company—I am heartily in favor of the creation of a Heroes' Day. It is my considered belief that the men that are giving their lives in the battle-field today for the sake of democracy of the world ought to be remembered, not only now, but forever, because it is the highest kind of sacrice that man can make; to give all and ask nothing in return. I believe that to honor their memory is the least that we can do.

ACTING MAYOR WALTER L. COLLINS—I feel sure that thousands of patriotic hearts will respond to such a suggestion as Heroes' Day. Yesterday's editorial was a most fitting one. All honor and glory should be paid those who have fallen. Let us have another Memorial Day. A solemn day in which we can honor those who have so gloriously fallen. We should celebrate our heroes' deeds and honor their memories.

MAJOR - GENERAL WILLIAM CROZIER, commanding the Department of the Northeast—The sentiment expressed in Heroes' Day is admirable. Whatever we can do to perpetuate the memories of those who have fallen in this war and to make evident that we are remembering those who are still fighting in this noble cause, will never be in vain. It seems to me that the churches would wisely take this occasion to use their pulpits in sending forth the message to the people of the debt we owe to those who are faithfully serving their country here and abroad. We cannot forget—we must not forget—the great service which the men at the front are rendering. Make Heroes' Day an inspiration to them.

REAR ADMIRAL SPENCER S. WOOD, commanding the First Naval District—Make Heroes' Day increase national and individual responsibility. Honor the men who have died in the cause so sacred to an American, w'o put liberty above autocracy. Honor the men who are still in this mighty struggle. Cheer them up. Make them feel that on Heroes' Day we are thinking and standing back of them.

Boys Deserve All We Can Give, Says Gov. McCall

THE idea is a most excellent one. It is a distinctive addition to the expressions we have of showing our lasting affection for our boys in the service. They who have given all for love of country and for humanity deserve from us all that we can give. May the day be so observed as also to inspire and encourage all of those now engaged in the struggle for the cause of civilization.—Statement by Governor Samuel W. McCall in relation to Bay State observance of Heroes Day

BODY EXHUMED AFTER DEATH OF TEACHER

Stomach of Miss Gay of Andover Analyzed; Mrs. Skeels Said to Have Tried Suicide

Andover, Aug. 28.—The body of Miss Florence M. Gay, teacher at the Abbot Academy for Girls, who died last December, has been exhumed. Analysis has been made of the stomach and its contents. The report of the analysis is withheld by District Attorney Henry G. Wells.

Mrs. Bessie May Skeels, a Lawrence nurse, who attended Miss Gay, is under arrest at the Lawrence General Hospital on a charge of larceny of jewelry from the estate of Miss Gay.

Mrs. Skeels, a widow of fifty-one years, became suddenly ill when the police visited her apartment in Chestnut street, here, to arrest her. It is charged that she attempted suicide by poison in an adjoining room while the officers were waiting for her to go with them.

She was taken to the Lawrence General Hospital instead of to the police station. Her appearance in court on the larceny charge has been delayed on account of her condition.

News of the exhumation of Miss Gay's body and of the analysis of the contents of her stomach came as a startling development.

The cause of Miss Gay's death last Winter has been given out as cerebral hemorrhage (apoplexy).

Mrs. Skeels was called to the Gay home a year ago to attend Miss Gay's mother, Mrs. Rosamond Gay. Later she nursed the daughter. Following Miss Gay's death Mrs. Gay went to live with relatives in Georgetown, where she died a fortnight ago.

After Miss Gay died several hundred dollars worth of jewelry was missed. Investigation led to arrangements for the arrest of Mrs. Skeels.

Mrs. Skeels was formerly a member of the First M. E. Church here. Her husband, manager of a Lawrence store, died some years ago. She was engaged to marry an Andover man, the wedding being set for next week.

A general alarm which brought help from Lynn, Chelsea, and Boston was pulled by Chief Kimball when he saw the great headway the flames were making in the flimsy wooden construction of the amusement piers along the boulevard.

The fire started in the Monkey House about 4:20 a. m. This is a wooden building situated between Beaver and Bath streets on the boulevard. The discovery was made by Metropolitan Policeman Michael Waters, who saw smoke issuing from the building and who was attracted by the chattering cries of dozens of monkeys disturbed by the smoke and fire.

BURNED LIKE KINDLING.

Waters rushed into the building and woke up "Shorty," the watchman and then ran for the fire alarm box two blocks away.

At the time of discovery, Waters says, there was not much fire in the building, but the light matchwood structure caught like kindling and soon the entire place was in flames, spreading in two directions.

Waters ran to the Pleasanton hotel and the Metropolitan Hotel, where he aroused the guests.

Seventy-five guests of the Metropolitan Hotel were sent to safety, although many of them escaped in their night clothes and lost their effects. Mrs. Mary Downes, sixty, employed as a domestic in the hotel, was taken out after she had waged a fierce fight with firemen to remain in the hotel until she could recover $40, hidden in the building. She finally was allowed to get the money and was then taken down a ladder to the street by Captain Verge of the Revere department and firemen Sharkey and Tighe. The woman and her three rescuers were all nearly overcome by smoke when they reached the street.

FLAMES LEAP ACROSS STREET.

Upon the arrival of the firemen the destruction had gained such headway that the entire block between Beaver and Bath streets was a fire and the flames were jumping across Ocean avenue in the rear, fanned by a brisk east wind and attacking the buildings on this street.

Streams were at once directed on the blaze was confined to the block between Beaver and Bath street although Chief Kimball soon saw upon his arrival that all hope of more than to try to confine the fire to this section was hopeless.

The fire had been under way about an hour when Captain Borden, lieutenant James Gibbons and several other firemen were trapped in the Nautical Gardens. They were working inside the building, well up toward the front, when an explosion of hot air caused the collapse of the structure and brought the roof down on their heads. Of the twenty odd men who were in or on the building at the time, many were struck by falling timbers or buried beneath piles of debris. Lieutenant Gibbons sustained a broken arm and collar bone and most of the others received injuries. They were treated in the emergency room of the State bathhouse.

HOSEMAN AHEARN BURIED.

In the opinion of Chief Kimball, only the light flimsy nature of the materials of which this building is constructed preventeg a great loss of life when it collapsed.

Hoseman C. F. Ahearn was nearest to Captain Borden at the time of the collapse. "I was very near him," said Ahearn, "but when the crash came I was buried and saw no more of him. Hoseman Louis C. Dunn pulled me out, and when I got outside I missed the captain. I feel sure he was buried and killed."

By the time the disappearance of Captain Borden was noticed the Nautical Gardens were a burning mass, and all hope of saving him was gone.

Captain Borden leaves a widow and four children. One of his sons is in the service of the United States.

Mayor Albert P. Hall of Revere was early on the scene, and was one of the men on the roof of the Nautical Gardens at the time of the collapse. He escaped injury.

SEARCH FOR THE BODY.

Medical Examiner Magrath remained at the ruins while the firemen made a careful search for the body of Captain Borden.

Two sections of the fire wall between the Nautical Gardens and the Virginia Reel remained standing after the fire. The firemen considered the walls dangerous and dynamited them.

Chief West of the Metropolitan Park Police placed the loss at $750,000. He said it would be impossible to replace the Nautical Gardens for less than $500,000. The estimated cost of the building was $250,000.

Chief West arrived on the scene just before the explosion which wrecking the Nautical Gardens. He said a dozen persons were cut by flying glass, thrown as far as the water edge. After this explosion a volume of smoke arose high in the air.

7 CUT BY FLYING GLASS.

Seven persons overcome by smoke or cut by flying glass were treated at the Frost Hospital in Chelsea. Two market Hotel was scorched.

others injured were treated by Dr. Parks of Revere.

Jess, a trained monkey valued at $100, with 19 others which were in the Monkey House, perished. The cries of these terrified creatures could be heard all along the beach as the flames approached the house where they were caged.

The Revere police say there have been three small fires in the Metropolitan Hotel and ten in the Virginia Reel this Summer. The fires, they say, were caused by the careless throwing of lighted cigarettes by late hour patrons.

THE BURNED BUILDINGS.

On the Beach boulevard—Two-story wooden building housing an African dodger and a shooting gallery; Metropolitan Hotel, Nautical Gardens, Virginia Reel, Monkey House, River of Doubt. The fire was stopped at the Pleasanton Hotel, which was scorched.

On Ocean avenue, above Beaver street—No. 448, old Metropolitan Hotel, partly destroyed, owned by Mrs. Rose Miller; No. 454, three-story building owned by Mrs. Alice Bradford; No. 460, Hotel Garland, owned by Mrs. Broadbine; No. 450, a cottage owned by Mrs. Agnes Downes; No. 445, three-story building and store owned by Postmaster Murray of Boston, all destroyed. The New Hayden, the Frost Hospital in Chelsea, Two market Hotel was scorched.

The German colonial secretary is a liberal and has been charged with holding the views of a group of Liberal pacifists.

REV. MR. HALL DRUG 'FIEND,' NEW THEORY IN MAINE DEATH MYSTERY

By PAUL HARRIS DRAKE.

Wells Depot, Me., Aug. 28.—Belief that Rev. Henry H. Hall was a dope fiend and that the habitual use of drugs may have been the cause of his downfall was expressed today by one of Hall's staunchest defenders, former State Auditor Lamont A. Stevens.

That Hall, who is confined to Alfred Jail awaiting a hearing on the charge of wife murder, was addicted to the use of morphine and that morphine and a paraphernalia for injecting it into the human system was found by the jail officials in Hall's suitcase, was the information revealed to an AMERICAN reporter by one of the wealthiest and most influential citizens of Eastern Maine.

Following former State Auditor Stevens' expression of belief that Hall was a morphine addict, the same explanation of Hall's erratic behavior was advanced from other sources.

SAYS HALL IS INNOCENT.

Sheriff Ernest L. Jones of Kennebunk, while in conversation with a well-known local citizen, reinforced the drug theory to account for Hall's predicament by stating that Hall was keenly being deprived of his favorite pain-chaser and has become a convert to a corncob pipe to steady his shattered nervous system.

Lamont A. Stevens further stated it as his belief that, although Hall's conduct may have been somewhat indiscreet, that would never convict him of the crime of wife murder.

"It is unthinkable," he said. "Hall will be held for the Grand Jury in my candid opinion," declared Mr. Stevens. "No trial Justice would take the responsibility of turning such a man loose on the community without a trial after the statements which have appeared in the newspapers."

"I cannot see how they can convict Hall of such a heinous crime. But in fairness to him, I hope he will not be released until twelve honest Jurymen have proclaimed him not guilty."

Mr. Stevens stated that his wife, Abbie Stevens, a leader in the Baptist Church sewing circle and a warm admirer of the accused minister, had been summoned as a witness at tomorrow's hearing before Judge Harold H. Bourne in the Kennebunk town Hall.

"But I can't let you talk with Mrs. Stevens," he said to the reporter, "because I don't want her to have to answer a lot of prying questions put to her before she takes the witness stand.

"Judge Emery, Hall's attorney, has talked with my wife, as have also County Attorney Chesley and Sheriff Roberts. Although I helped build the church and contribute to its support, I am not a member and I never heard Hall preach in my life. I know nothing about the case except what I hear and see in the papers," said Mr. Stevens.

CLAIMS MORPHINE WAS FOUND.

In explanation of the alleged use of "dope" by the accused minister, Mr. Stevens said:

"It has come to me pretty straight that Hall was a morphine user. I was told that they found morphine and a hypodermic syringe in his kit. I can believe that such may have been the case.

"Hall was a terribly nervous man. He was a nervous wreck, it seemed to me. He couldn't keep still and his eyes roved incessantly. He made lots of people nervous, he was so fidgety. Hall had been in different hospitals a lot. He had trouble with his appendix.

"Whenever he suffered considerable pain they would administer small doses of morphine. In that way he probably formed the dope habit. He was subject to abdominal seizures and painful fainting spells. What was more natural than that he should carry around with him a supply of morphine and the instrument for administering it?

"If Hall acted queerly at times, I would as soon lay it at the door of a drug as anything else, because no sane man in possession of his wits would carry on as the papers say he did. This drug fiend explanation of the minister's behavior strikes me as very plausible."

Mr. Stevens denied that he had anything to do with employing Judge Emery of Biddeford as counsel for Hall, but admitted giving Hall money following his wife's death after falling from the Little River railroad bridge on June 11.

HALL TO TAKE STAND.

"Several of the better fixed of us made up a little purse of more than $200 out of sympathy for what we believed to be Hall's misfortune in losing his wife. I have had no reason to think differently of Mrs. Hall's unfortunate death," declared Mr. Stevens.

"If Hall had wanted to rid himself of his wife, why did he let her live at all on that night when she fell from the bridge? If he was bent on murder, he could easily have held the head of his unconscious wife under water and so finished her then and there."

by interning his automobile on Sunday, or any other day, he will do it.

As the autoist tried dimly to realize the far-reaching effect of the anti-Sunday riding rule he found this cheerful conclusion:

THE SAVING IN GASOLINE FOR WAR PURPOSES BY ELIMINATION OF SUNDAY MOTORING, EXCEPT WHERE NECESSARY, IS ESTIMATED AT 1,475,000 GALLONS FOR MASSACHUSETTS ALONE. THE GASOLINE SAVING FOR NEW ENGLAND ON THE SAME BASIS IS ESTIMATED AT 2,500,000 GALLONS.

HIGHWAY COMMISSION TO HELP.

The State Highway Commission, which has jurisdiction over autoing, will back up the National Fuel Administration. Highway Commissioner James W. Synan says:

"The Fuel Administration's request takes us by surprise, and it is impossible to say just now what our board will do about it, although, of course, it is but natural that we shall work hand in hand with the Federal authorities."

It is known that drastic steps for conservation of gasoline have been under consideration.

Among the plans which have been suggested for enforcing any conservation regulations is the simple one of refusing to supply tires to owners of passenger cars who fail to do their duty.

EDICT HITS HOTELS HARD.

What will the Sunday ban on motor vehicles do to the Bay State?

Estimating conservatively, the Federal Fuel Administration's request will cut into the Sunday riding of about 308,000 persons in Massachusetts, reduce innkeepers' and restaurateurs' business for the day by about $620,000, slice approximately $250,000 from gasoline sales each Sunday, and save not far from 1,470,000 gallons of that fuel.

It is estimated that pleasure automobiles carry about 800,000 passengers in Massachusetts each Sunday, motorcycles about 75,000 and power boats close to 30,000. This is allowing an average of four persons to each auto, one and one-half persons to each motorcycle and three persons to each power boat.

Probably seven out of every ten motorists patronize some hotel, inn, roadhouse or restaurant to the extent of at least one meal each Sunday, and seven out of every ten motor-cyclists will do likewise. Three out of four powerboat passengers are likely to carry their own lunches, the fourth, like the motor vehicle riders, paying on an average $1 for his Sunday meal.

SAVE 1,470,000 GALLONS.

Estimating that each Sunday motorist will use about seven gallons of gasoline, each motorcyclist about one gallon and each powerboat operator about two gallons, the saving in gasoline each Sunday will not be far from 1,470,000 gallons.

Approximately 200,000 automobiles, 50,000 motorcycles and 10,000 powerboats in Massachusetts are effected by the request.

Taxicab companies will be hard hit by the request, coming as it does at their best season and affecting one of their best days.

It is estimated that there are about 2,000 taxicabs and renting cars in use each Sunday at this time of the year. These cars average about three gallons of gasoline apiece, making a total saving of about 6,000 gallons. Some 3,000 operators are employed Sunday. These men will lose a day's pay. They are paid about $3 a day, making a loss in wages of about $9,000.

1,462,537 RIDERS AFFECTED.

The estimate of passenger cars, motorcycles and power boats in the New England States and of the average numbers of riders is as follows:

	Passenger cars	Motorcycles	Powerboats
Mass.....	250,000	50,000	10,000
Maine.....	40,000	2,000	.....

Grand total of vehicles—425,807.
Grand total of riders—1,462,537.

VEHICLES NOT INCLUDED.

Motor vehicles to which the Fuel Administration's request do not apply include:

Tractors and motor trucks used in actual transportation of freight.

Vehicles of physicians used in performance of professional duties.

Ambulance, fire apparatus, police patrol wagons, undertakers' wagons and conveyances used for funerals.

Railway equipment using gasoline.

Repair outfits used by telephone and public service companies.

Motor vehicles on errands of necessity in rural communities where transportation by steam or electricity is not available.

National Fuel Administrator Garfield says:

"War necessities are being and will continue to be taken care of, but this is the period of the year when consumption of gasoline is at its highest and the increased domestic demands, together with the extensive military operations in France, have made necessary for a limited period the adoption of safeguards against possible shortage."

The motor ban will make changes in the week-end plans of thousands of New Englanders next Sunday and Labor Day.

The question was raised today whether the request was expected to apply to holidays as well. Nothing was said in the Fuel Administration's order, however, about holidays.

But the administration did say in its statement:

"An appeal is made to exercise rigid economy in the consumption of gasoline during the next few weeks as a necessary and practical act of patriotism."

In regard to the coming double holiday—the suggestion was also heard today that week-ending motorists might get away Saturday afternoon or evening and return Labor Day, thereby resting on the Sabbath and following the order.

Order Is More to Save Tires Than Gasoline, Declares Head of Dealers

John H. MacAlman, head of the Boston Automobile Dealers Association, who has just returned from a conference with the War Board at Washington, today interpreted for the Boston AMERICAN the new order requesting the discontinuance of the use of automobiles on Sunday.

He says that the feeling in the War Board on the matter is summed up as follows:

1. Tires is more gasoline being made now than being used. But how long this may continue under the newdraft laws is a question. Consequently the War Board is looking ahead, is trying to keep down the waste of gasoline for possible days to come. The new order is more intended to influence people in ways of economy than because of actual shortage at this time.

2. Rubber is now more important than gasoline. Shortage of ships has reduced the rubber imports and tires next yeu will be worth their weight in gold. In asking the people to save gasoline the government has in mind also the saving of tires.

3. Normal use of the automobile for business and recreational purposes is not to be frowned upon by the government, but joyriding must cease. There is more gasoline wasted than would supply America's air fleet.

THE QUESTION ACUTE.

Mr. MacAlman is preparing a statement from the association of which he is the head, in which the association will recommend the public's adherence to the request of the Fuel Administration.

"This whole thing goes back, like everything else, to the war," said Mr. MacAlman today. "It is entirely a matter of ships. The tire question is more acute than the gasoline shortage and it is more to save tires than gasoline that the request is made.

"Next year tires will be worth their weight in gold because there are not enough ships available to transport rubber to this country. Many of the ships, for instance, are carrying coal to England and France.

"Here again there may be a change, because if the retreat of the Germans, whose hold the French coal mines, goes on and these mines are uncovered, France will have her own coal and we will have more ships available for other things."

ALWAYS TRICKS TO CONSERVE.

Mr. MacAlman urges every automobile owner to get behind the government and conserve gasoline, tires and other automobile accessories.

"It may be that next year when the new draft goes through that the shortage of men at the oil wells will cause a gasoline shortage," Mr. MacAlman said.

"The point is that all the gasoline we can save now will add to the surplus which may have to carry the war essentials over to the end of the war."

James W. Maguire, another automobile dealer said today that he believed in standing behind the administration in saving gasoline if it were necessary to do so.

"A month ago we were told that there was a 6,000,000 barrel surplus of gasoline, and certainly there are few cars being made than ever. I hardly think the order necessary.

"It seems to me a good deal like the order prohibiting a man shooting duck on Sunday. Rich men who have running stands and live decoys and all the rest of the stuff, shoot all the week and don't care about it on Sunday. But the poor chap who works in a noon shop all week has no chance to get a crack at a duck except on Sunday, and then they won't let him. It's the same way with automobiles. There are lots of people who own cars who never use them except Sundays. It seems that some way ought to be found to regulate this thing."

TAXICAB MEN SEEK EXEMPTION.

A representative of the taxicab business went to Washington today to try and secure a ruling exempting from the request taxicabs used for business purposes.

President J. Freeman Marsten of the Taxi Service Company said: "The present request seems to be rather ambiguous. It does not exempt taxicabs, but reads, 'including all vehicles for hire.'

"We do a big train business Sunday nights. One of the leading hotel men of Boston this morning told me he did not believe that the request could have been meant to apply to us, for if so many of his patrons will be practically unable to arrive or leave Sunday nights, as the taxicab affords them the only means of getting transportation for themselves and their luggage."

Assistant Manager Hodson of the Town Taxi Company said: "I think the request is a good idea."

Why Run-down Pale Exhausted Women Should Take Iron

"There can be no beautiful, healthy, rose-cheeked, steady nerved women without iron. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks—their charm and attractiveness depart. I always insist that my patients take organic iron—Nuxated Iron—(not metallic iron which often corrodes the stomach and does more harm than good). Nuxated Iron is entirely assimilated, does not blacken nor injure the teeth nor upset the stomach. It will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, irritable, careworn, haggard women in two weeks' time in many cases. I have used it in my own practice with most surprising results."—Ferdinand King, M.D., well known New York Physician and medical author. DOWD GIVES HIS CASE AGAINST O'HARA

Improper conduct in regard to certain arrests, misconduct in or about the premises of some women at Oak Island Grove, improper language before these women and misconduct with reference to money taken from prisoners are among the specifications filed with Mayor Alfred S. Hall of Revere by former Patrolman Thomas W. Dowd in his charges against Lieutenant Thomas O'Hara of the Revere Police Department.

There will be a hearing on Dowd's charges against O'Hara at Revere City Hall at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

Dowd was removed from the force by Mayor Hall last May. Following a hearing on charges of conduct unbecoming an officer and detrimental to discipline, He is now foreman in an East Boston munitions plant.

Recently he filed charges against O'Hara. The Mayor demanded specifications, which Dowd submitted in a letter. The Mayor declined to make the specifications public. Today Dowd made public the letter he wrote to the Mayor.

What do you look for in a cigarette?

Smoothness? Yes.
Fragrance? Yes.
Body? Yes.
"Pep"? Yes, to let you know you're smoking.

No one tobacco grown combines them all. That's why, to make the Mecca cigarette, they have to use 12 tobaccos—7 American and 5 Turkish.

They mix these 12—in just the right proportion—but mixing is not enough. For 50 hours they pass moist heat through them all and thus draw the smoothness and fragrance of the Turkish into the American and the body and "pep" of the American into the Turkish. This is the famous Still-Blend process.

This is why over a million Mecca smokers have found all they look for in a cigarette.

FORD IS NOMINATED FOR U. S. SENATORSHIP

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 28.—Henry Ford, who entered the race at the behest of President Wilson, was nominated for United States Senator by the Democrats in yesterday's primary election. Although Henry Ford's name appeared on both the Republican and Democratic ballots, former Secretary of the Navy Truman H. Newberry was the choice of the Republicans by a large majority for United States Senator. At noon Newberry was far ahead of Ford and former Governor Osborn on the Republican ticket. Partial returns from sixty-four out of eighty-three counties gave Newberry 23,389, Ford 20,658, Osborne 12,939.

KEAVEY IS NOW SLATED AS FALL RIVER CAPTAIN

Fall River, Aug. 28.—As a result of an investigation conducted by the Boston AMERICAN and as a further result of information placed in the possession of the Civil Service Commission, there will be no examination tomorrow for eligibles to fill the vacancy in the police captaincy. The commission has certified the names of those on the eligible list for deputy superintendent, and from that list the new captain will be named. Inspector John Keavey of the North station heads the list, and there is every indication that he will be named, despite the opposition of Chairman Lawson of the Fall River Police Commission.

PAPER MERCHANTS URGE AGAINST WASTE

Paper conservation has become so necessary that the New England Paper Merchants' Association has addressed an appeal to users against waste, and announces that if paper is to remain on the priority list, care must be exercised in its consumption. Warning to this effect comes from the priority division of the War Industries Board. Within a few days paper users will receive pledge cards from their regular sources of supply, which are to be filled out and filed in places where orders are executed.

Seven reasons given why paper should not be wasted are:

1—Government requirements are increasing rapidly and must be supplied.

2—A pound of paper wasted means the loss of three pounds of coal for war purposes.

3—Chemicals used in paper making can be used for making ammunition and poison gases.

4—Labor and capital thrown away.

5—Economy will release thousands of freight cars for war purposes.

6—Care in purchase and use will help finance the war.

7—Economy will prevent shortage.

WOMAN PRAISES KAISER, NEARLY MOBBED BY CROWD

New York, Aug. 28.—A well-dressed woman came near being mobbed during a patriotic meeting at City Hall when she denounced President Wilson and praised the Kaiser as the "best man in the world." She gave her name as Annie Gerlach, thirty. She told the police she was an Austrian, and that her father was a colonel in the Austrian army.

Several of the women in the crowd slapped her face and girls tore at her clothing. The woman was being roughly handled when the police charged into the crowd and seized her.

WHY not be just as careful and economical in the purchase of the Piano as you are in the buying of furniture, clothing and other merchandise—You are probably more familiar with other various merchandise values than you are with Piano values. It is this unfamiliarity with pianos, their construction, cost, etc., that makes it difficult for you to judge of the fairness or unfairness of piano prices. I will try to show you how to save $100 on the purchase of any make piano you desire.

LIVING COST 50 TO 55 PER CENT. OVER 1914

It costs from 50 to 55 per cent. more to live today than it did in 1914. The National Industrial Conference Board says so.

For example:

Food in general costs 63 per cent. more.
Heat 16 per cent. more.
Clothing 77 per cent. more.
Fuel and light 45 per cent. more.
Sundries 50 per cent. more.

These are the general figures. Specifically some articles of clothing have increased in cost slightly less or very much more. Women's cheap blouses have gone up 50 per cent.; men's overalls 14 per cent.; knit underwear 100 per cent.; women's shoes $8.5 per cent.; men's shoes 63 per cent.; gloves 100 per cent.

The price of coal, the board finds, has gone up from 30 to 40 per cent. over 1914 prices.

While the board finds that the average increase in rent has been 15 per cent., it goes on to say that in Bridgeport and Waterbury, Ct., Quincy, Mass., and Cleveland, the increases have amounted to 60 and even to 100 per cent. It also states that there are indications that rents will continue to increase.

The report states that all articles of food show an increase over 1914.

MANY DEATHS IN PEKIN EPIDEMIC OF GRIPPE

Pekin, Aug. 28.—A severe epidemic of grippe is spreading here. Many deaths are reported.

15,000 AT FIELD DAY OF SALEM PLAYGROUNDS

Salem, Aug. 28.—Approximately 15,000 grownups and children gathered on Salem Common today for the thirteenth annual playground field day. The festivities got under way at 2 o'clock with a patriotic parade in which 2,000 children were lined up. Patriotic features and floats predominated.

The line of march from Summer street through Essex street to the Common was thronged and the many patriotic offerings received applause. At 3 o'clock there was a demonstration of animated posters by the children from the eight playgrounds.

Some of the children who have raised pigs had their livestock on display. Others exhibited the results of their agricultural efforts. Salem Cadet Band played, the concert continuing into the evening. Athletic sports and games were also featured.

MISS HELEN ROBINSON WEDS ST. LOUIS LAWYER

In St. Mary's Church, Dedham, Miss Helen J. Robinson, daughter of Mrs. Anne F. Robinson of No. 102 Mt. Vernon street, and Robert T. Conroy, a St. Louis lawyer, were married by the Rev. James H. Looby of the Sacred Heart Church of Taunton. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Mary T. Robinson. The best man was Andrew Looby. They will live in St. Louis.

KITCHIN PREDICT 12 PER CENT. INCOME TAX

By International News Service.

Washington, Aug. 28.—The $8,000,000,000 revenue bill will probably be reported by the House Ways and Means Committee on Friday, Chairman Kitchin announced today.

He expressed the view that in it would be written a flat income tax rate of 12 per cent. without any differential on unearned incomes, although a rebate of 2 per cent. might be permitted on earned income up to $2,000 or to $25,000.

It is reported that Secretary Adoo, although he first informed committee he considered a differential on unearned incomes essential to success of the next Liberty loan drive, is now willing that that rate should be charged, if it is set that sufficient revenue can be had thereby and their loan proposed at the same time.

DANCER HURLEY, EAST BOSTON, OFF TO CAMP

Daniel J. Hurley, prize dancer of East Boston, who obtained special permission to enlist, left Southampton for Camp Dix today in charge of twenty-four draftees. Hurley's third brother to enlist, having previously been sent to the front by others, Harold and George, in the service. A surprise party was held at the home of his mother at No. 81 Irvard street, Dorchester, and he was given a wrist watch.

It's well worth while to take a trip to the 7th Floor, New Building, to see our wonderful Battle Scene Picture—it will stimulate your patriotism.

* * *

The August Fur Sale is fast drawing to a close. November prices will be very much higher, but Furs bought now need not be paid for until December.

* * *

Our Juvenile Floor is all ready for the demands to be made on it by the young folks preparing to return to school. The whole Fall outfit may be conveniently purchased on this one floor.

* * *

How about your W. S. S.? Our zeal in buying them should be great indeed when we think of the heroic work our boys at the front are accomplishing.

Jordan Marsh Company

The Government uses peach stones in its war industries. Save your peach stones, dry carefully, and leave them at Liberty Bank

Pay 1-4 on Furs now, the rest in November.

Furs will be higher next week—don't wait

You are invited to see some Lyons velvet hats at $5 and $7.50

Filene's

Store closed all day Saturday and Monday

Your next leisure half hour—

THE NEXT time you have to wait for the matinee, or between appointments, you will find it well spent in inspecting the exhibit of War Posters of the Allied Nations on our walls.

Modern warfare enlists experts in every profession, trade and art. In every Allied country the best artists of that nation have enlisted in their country's service and laid the best work of their art on the altar of patriotic service.

So it happens that a collection of War Posters like this of ours is really an Art Exhibit of the first water, besides being an inspiration to Patriotism.

The exhibit is from top to bottom of the store; it is still growing; it includes many posters that are very rare and valuable; is it well worth coming here to see?

12 SUMMER STREET SHOW WINDOWS OF WOMEN'S WAR-SERVICE UNIFORMS

WHY does a woman adore a man in a uniform and detest a uniform for herself? Rather ask, "Why did she?"

This is intended to be the first complete showing of official American war-service uniforms for women. Months have been spent getting them together. One window will show the various uniforms of the Red Cross, another the Y. M. C. A., others the Y. W. C. A., the Salvation Army, the yeowomen's uniforms, and the various uniforms, many with trousers, worn by women in war work in the munition factories.

These uniforms will probably have a permanent influence on women's fashions of America and England.

They have an intimate interest for everybody—from the Army nurses' uniform worn at Camp Devens, the good-looking gray uniform of the Women's Motor Corps of America, the uniforms worn by the Women's Land Army, by women elevator-men, and by conductorettes on the Interborough Railroad of New York, to the uniforms of women's Camouflage Service and the Service Dresses for patriotic women not in organized war work, originated by Filene's.

All are original garments, with the exception of the uniforms of the American Committee for Devastated France, which had to be copied because there is no original in this country. Windows will be in Thursday, Friday, Saturday.

BABY

TWO children to ONE pair of Neverslip shoes?

Neverslip shoes are made of such good stock that instances have occurred where they have been handed down as play shoes to the next younger child. Neverslip shoes come in sizes 2 to 11—Little feet that wear these sizes grow very fast—so fast, indeed, it isn't ever safe to guess at the size. Bring the children in to be fitted—shoes that are too long, make children awkward, short shoes deform the feet. Practically all the Fall Neverslip shoes are here—black, tan, white.

Sizes 2 to 6, without heels, $1.75 to $2.85.

Sizes 5 to 8, spring heels, $2.50 to $4.

Sizes 8½ to 11, spring heels, $3.25 to $4.75.

Children's smocked corduroy coats, $6

We think you will look twice at the price of these pretty little coats. They are high-waisted and very full and cunning. They are warm, too, being both lined and interlined. Leaf brown and white. Sizes 1 to 3.

(Filene's—mail orders filled—third floor)

Broadcloth SUITS $35, for women who know values

Women who don't know values will probably pay more for suits no better. These suits are typical Filene value—that is to say they are a lot for the money, and they are here day in, day out, in the wanted sizes and colors.

—One of these suits is sketched. The coat is hand lined with peau de cygne. The collar can be worn high or low.

—Women's oxford mixture suits, $30 and more.

—Women's fur-trimmed suits, $68.50 and more.

$35

Sketched, a noticeably well-tailored broadcloth suit for women, a Filene value at $35.

Women are buying fur-trimmed COATS early this year

Nutria is the favorite fur trimming—it tones so well with the soft coat browns. Filene values in women's fur-trimmed coats start off with good-looking nutria trimmed wool velours coats at $55, and soft thick duotone coats with nutria collars so big they are almost capes at $62.50.

Not fur trimmed—women's velours coats lined with silk, $39.50. Women's Bolivia coats, not fur trimmed, silk lined, $50.

ROXBURY SCHOOL STRONG BOX DISAPPEARS

"Was there a strong box containing several hundred dollars in gold, Roxbury city documents, newspapers published during the Revolutionary War and other mementoes inserted in the cornerstone of the old Dearborn school?" is a question citizens of Roxbury would like answered.

The last vestige of the old school was razed today by Contractor Thomas A. Elston to make room for portable schools to be erected immediately. This is the school on which Marks Angell, junk dealer, claimed the city lost from $15,000 to $17,000 through the award of the contract for its demolition. The Finance Commission is still investigating Angell's claim.

Politicians are wondering where the strong box disappeared and whether Angell knew of its presence when he made his charges. Contractor Elston disclaims all knowledge of the whereabouts of the cornerstone.

"I had my eyes open for the cornerstone and if I saw a strong box at or near or under it I would be only too glad to tell what it contained," said Daniel H. Sullivan, chief schoolhouse inspector. "As a matter of fact I don't know where the cornerstone is located. I do know that an elderly man came here and said that a certain man wanted to get it for some recently constructed villa near the Brookline line."

Henry Alexander Scammell Dearborn was mayor of Roxbury when the old cornerstone of the school was laid in 1851. Colonel William A. Gaston's father was a member of the Roxbury Common Council that year. It is stated that he contributed several articles for insertion in the strong box.

What The Packers Do For You

Not very many years ago in the history of the world, the man that lived in America had to hunt for his food, or go without.

Now he sits down at a table and decides what he wants to eat; or his wife calls up the market and has it sent home for him. And what he gets is incomparably better.

Everyone of us has some part in the vast human machine, called society, that makes all this convenience possible.

The packer's part is to prepare meat and get it to every part of the country sweet and fresh—to obtain it from the stock raiser, to dress it, cool it, ship it many miles in special refrigerator cars, keep it cool at distributing points, and get it into the consumer's hands—your hands—through retailers, all within about two weeks.

For this service—so perfect and effective that you are scarcely aware that anything is being done for you—you pay the packers an average profit of only a fraction of a cent a pound above actual cost on every pound of meat you eat.

CONTEST CLAIM AGED WOMAN IS INSANE

Mrs. Wilmerding, 76, Is Defended by Nephew in Providence Court Case

Providence, Aug. 28.—Medical experts are at odds over the mental condition of Mrs. Louise Atherta Wilmerding, seventy-six, whose niece, Mrs. Maria L. Aldrich of Boston and Berlin, N. H., has asked the court to confine her aunt on the ground of unsound mind.

J. H. Alexander of California, a brother to Mrs. Aldrich, disagrees with his sister, according to a telegram read to the court, and has asked counsel to protect the proceedings.

Doctors Harry B. Sanborn and George E. Simpson, the latter of the State Hospital for Insane, testified the woman is of unsound mind.

Doctors James H. Haberlin, Frederic J. Farnell and William H. Palmer told the court Mrs. Wilmerding is capable of caring for herself.

According to Attorney W. M. P. Bowen, for Mrs. Wilmerding, the proceedings had been started before the court previous to his entering the case at the request of his client. Attorney Bowen said:

"I found that Mrs. Aldrich wanted her aunt to go to Butler Hospital. I communicated with Mrs. Aldrich's brother, J. B. Alexander, who instructed me to protest the action. Mrs. Wilmerding was a Keith donor to her marriage and her father was a West Point graduate.

PROVIDENCE STOREHOUSE IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Providence, Aug. 28.—Fire early today practically destroyed the storehouse of the H. J. Astin Company at the junction of Peck, Dyer and Friendship streets. The loss is estimated at $50,000.

The building, which consisted of three stories, was packed with machinery and kitchen utensils, the entire centre of the storehouse was badly gutted. The flames at first menaced the plant of the Narragansett Electric Lighting Company, directly across the street, but were quickly put under control.

PRETTY MELODIES IN "SOME NIGHT"

By FRED J. McISAAC

"Some Night," styled a delirious musical comedy, book, lyrics and music by Harry Delf, and staged by W. H. Post and Julian Mitchell, is playing a fortnight at the Tremont Theatre preparatory to going into New York.

Joseph Klaw, the producer, is the son of Marc Klaw of the firm of Klaw & Erlanger, and this, his first production, has awakened lots of interest in the theatrical profession.

Harry Delf, the author, will be remembered as the clever dancer in "The Rainbow Girl." Wearing the uniform of a United States sailor he was one of the audience at the Tremont last night.

Mr. Delf is a much better writer of lyrics and music than he is a dramatist; this is obvious at once. His songs are all bright and gay, with catching rhythms and catchy airs. His verses are snappy and humorous. Certain of the concerted numbers are remarkably fine. There is a number for twelve girls, during which some dance, some play musical instruments and all engage in effective business to a very contagious tune.

Mr. Klaw picked a very lovely double sextet of maidens for "Some Night," and has given every one of them something special to do.

The place is in a transitory stage, of course, and many of the things might criticise will be changed completely in a day or two. But as given last night, "Some Night" needs a bit of fixing.

Very bad lighting spoiled both prologue and afterpiece, which are scenes in the war zone. There was no excuse for what happened on the stage at the beginning and end of the piece and you may be sure that such poor stage management won't happen again.

But the hero, being wounded in the prologue, dreams a curious dream which carries him back to Long Island, where he used to live, and where a mysterious girl with a bundle of stolen bonds, a couple of detectives, a deaf mute, a quartet of rural policemen, all get mingled in a riot of confusion, which never gets solved, for the dreamer wakes up to find the mysterious heroine of the dream in the person of a Red Cross nurse.

Forrest Winant, last here in the leading role in "Turn to the Right," proves a find for musical comedy, for he has an excellent baritone and puts over several musical numbers. James C. Marlowe and Thomas H. Walsh as a pair of detectives furnished most of the laughs, but Louis Simon as a deaf mute supplies some admirable pantomime.

Roma June as the mysterious girl sang very sweetly, but was not at all convincing as an actress. Charles Welsh-Homer was amusing as a British butler.

SAYS GAMBLING RUNS RIOT IN PROVIDENCE

Real Estate Office Used to Policy and Lottery, Declares Club Woman

Providence, Aug. 28.—The ancient lottery method of collecting money is in full swing at an alleged "real estate" office on Westminster street, where wire-tappers, gamblers and sure-thing promoters hold forth, a prominent clubwoman has reported to the authorities.

For weeks the old games have been revived, and it remained for one of the women workers to ferret out the hiding places of the promoters. She says:

"The gambling element is using all kinds of subterfuges to evade the loafer law. In making an investigation I strolled into a supposed real-estate office on Westminster street and am convinced it is the headquarters of this so-called Louisiana Lottery gamble. The well-groomed youth in the sparcely-furnished office was discourteous and positively insulting when I began to question him. I have talked with a police captain who tells me he is watching the place I refer to, and if we are going to win this war it is time to put grime on the shoulders of some of the kind of shirkers I encountered in this office."

At Police Headquarters it was said the "office" referred to by the women is being watched. The proprietor is said to be a wire-tapper, and credited with having knowledge of a shooting affray at Narragansett Pier several months ago, although the police say the "evidence is lacking."

HAWLEY RESIGNS FROM MALDEN SCHOOL BOARD

Major Truman R. Hawley of the Judge-Advocate's Department, has resigned as a member of the Malden School Committee, owing to his absence from Malden during his service. His term did not expire until December 31, 1919.

Major Hawley's successor may be chosen by a joint convention of the School Board and city Council, or it may be left unfilled until the voters elect his successor at the city election.

NEW ARRIVALS SWELL RANKS AT DEVENS

Maine Sends 600 and Rhode Island 225—Bay State Men Get in Today

Camp Devens, Ayer, Aug. 28.—The ranks of the camp were swelled by the arrival of 225 men from Rhode Island and 600 from Maine. Today Massachusetts will send 500 and Vermont 425. A delegation of 250 from New Hampshire has been assigned to Companies 1 and 2 of the Depot Brigade. The arrival of the men today will complete the August arrivals.

Next week the first arrivals of the September draft will be received and assigned to the Depot Brigade.

Men are being continually transferred out of the Depot Brigade into the division and men not physically fit for overseas duty are being transferred to the development battalion.

Names of men immediately qualified for appointment as officers are being sought from company commanders for appointment to officers' training schools. The advanced school for non-commissioned officers has been opened in the Depot Brigade.

F. B. Seavey of Portsmouth, N. H., who graduated from a two months' course at a training school at Williams College and who had received an appointment to the officers' training school at Camp Lee, arrived with the New Hampshire delegation.

Luther C. Goodrich, born in China, and whose parents are missionaries in that country, is a member of the 20th Company, Depot Brigade, as a voluntary inducted recruit. He registered in Hinsdale and returned to China to await being called. Failing to receive a notice, he came back to enlist and was accepted.

Several vaudeville artists of the camp will visit the Littleton Town Hall tonight to give a concert for the benefit of the boys of that town that have answered the call to arms in either the army or the navy.

Special furloughs have been granted the Hebrews in camp for the holidays which start next week. They will be granted leave of absence from noon of the 6th until reveille of the 8th to celebrate New Year's, and three day will be allowed to observe Yom Kippur or the Day of Atonement.

WILL TRAIN 12TH AS QUICKLY AS POSSIBLE

Commanders Told They Must Labor Hard to Prepare Men in Alloted Time

Camp Devens, Ayer, Aug. 28.—Statements to the effect that the 13th Division would be trained in the shortest possible time in keeping with army discipline and would be given a severe intensive training with an extended daily program have been confirmed by Lieutenant-Colonel Elvid Hunt of the general staff, who told the company commanders in the presence of Major-General McCain that they must labor hard to train the men in the alloted time.

The officers were given a demonstration of securing results and were told what to do and what not to do in order that they might bring together a "magnificent division."

The commissioned officers were called on the main parade ground and all the visitors in camp assembled on and around the division officers' club heard the words of instruction.

Company I of the 26th Regiment, in command of Captain C. W. Neues, was used as the unit on which to demonstrate and two picked men were called before the officers and given orders by Colonel Hunt.

Colonel Hunt explained the methods to be used to make a good soldier and what should be expected of an efficient noncommissioned officer. He also told the officers not to be hasty in expecting too much, but to get all possible out of a recruit in the shortest possible time.

Close order drills should be learned in from ten to thirty days, Colonel Hunt said, and schools should be established for the drilling of men unable to learn in a reasonable time.

The schools should not all be theoretical, but should be practical as well, and confidential talks with soldiers were necessary, he declared.

The training program of the division will probably be slightly changed as a result of the suggestions of Colonel Hunt, who is visiting every training camp in the country, improving the system of instruction.

While Colonel Hunt was addressing the officers the training field was being marked off under the new scheme of Colonel J. B. Kemper of the 26th Regiment, who is the originator of many ideas in training.

About 800 officers attended the lecture. Officers of the foreign missions were also in the crowd of listeners.

The marching step of 120 to a minute which has been in operation in the 76th Regiment under orders of Colonel Oliver B. Dockery, Jr., has been adopted as the time for the entire division, and the step is used on all field drills and hikes. Majors have been accompanying their commands of late.

All enlisted men seeking commissions have been notified that they are liable to court-martial if they write to President Wilson, the War Department, General McCain or any politician in a hope of securing a commission.

All applications for commissions must be made to the company commanders.

The 73d Regiment Band has started on a parade of the regimental streets every morning serenading the men at reveille, and while many of the men are lovers of music, they have admitted that it has no charms at 5:15 a. m.

High Heels Fail 60 Girls Eager for War Service

High heels do not always count.

They did not count when sixty young women besieged the Marine Corps recruiting station, No. 22 Tremont Row, and asked to be accepted as stenographers in that war service.

They were required to be sixty inches tall, but many of them could not reach that figure without high heels on their shoes, and when rejected they went sorrowfully away.

Captain Bernard J. Doherty, recruiting officer, expects that some compromise about the sixty inches may be forthcoming in a few days.

RADIO SAILORS TREATED ALL ALIKE

Friction Between Regulars and Reserve Men Has Been Slight

By S. HARRY FERRIS.

U. S. Naval Radio School, Cambridge, Aug. 28.—The latest order from Secretary of the Navy Daniels that "differences in the uniform of regular navy men and members of the Naval Reserve Force" shall be abolished as a means of allaying friction between the representatives of the two branches of the service will have little effect at the Radio School.

It has been the policy of Captain Nat. P. Ayer, since he took control as commanding officer, to have every man treated the same as every other without regard to whether he was a regular-establishment or a reserve man.

The only real difference between the two branches is that the regulars are enlisted for definite terms whereas the reserve men are only pledged to serve the government for the duration of the war.

It has nevertheless been a fact that the regulars have been inclined to criticise the reservemen and to accuse them, in some cases, of being shirkers and, even at the Radio School, there have been many heated arguments over the subject.

With all distinguishing marks abolished by the Secretary's order there will, undoubtedly, be much less of this in the future.

August G. Kroon, one of the enlisted men, has been placed in charge of the setting-up exercises of the sailors, and has succeeded in developing a system that is proving very satisfactory. One of the features of War Service Day at the Radium on September 7 will be an exhibition by the sailors under Mr. Kroon's direction.

When a Girl Marries

A NEW SERIAL OF YOUNG MARRIED LIFE

The Lack of Money Causes Jim an Uneasy Time, Though the Bride Laughs It Away

By Anne Lisle

CHAPTER IX.

(Copyright, 1918, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

"I'LL drive you to the Walgrave, establish you safely, and then I'll take our little car back to the garage," said Jim, as we motored into town from our honeymoon trip.

"The Walgrave! But that's so frightfully expensive!" I gasped.

"Well, I don't know much about New York hotels, Princess Anne, but that's where I've always stayed. Where would you suggest going?"

"Not to a hotel at all, Jim. Let's go to my little boarding house—I'd be happy there."

"But I'd not be happy to have you there! We'll make it the Walgrave till we find a little place of our own. Look here, little girl, I may have to bring you back to the city, after only a week of honeymoon vacationing, but there'll be no boarding houses in yours, Mrs. Harrison."

I turned to study my husband's face. It was drawn, haunted—it were again the strange expression that had stolen across it last night.

I wanted to protest against the extravagance of the yellow marble, violet velvet, circassian walnut hotel to which he was planning to take me, but I felt that another word would only add to Jim's suffering.

The lobby of the Walgrave was filled with women who wear rajah silks at Palm Beach in February and sables in New York in June—with them and the men who can pay for such luxuries. And my Jim in his uniform passed among them like a king, though he limped and leaned heavily on his cane as if he were tired.

A Gay Sight

Our room was all rose and gold and creamy-tan wood. It had one narrow window high above the street, and a little white enamel bath was window-less. The boy who escorted us there opened its window, put it down again a little way, lowered the shade, ran it up again, moved the thermos bottle of ice water around from one side of its tray to another—and then elaborately bowed himself out with Jim's extravagant tip in his hand.

My husband looked around the room. There was a bitter tone in his voice when he spoke:

"Dicky Royce takes two rooms and bath on the Fifth avenue side when he brings Sally here."

I pretended not to hear and swept myself a curtsey in the long mirror embedded in the closet door.

"Welcome to town, Anne Harrison," I cried. "Welcome to the hotel you used to be frightened even to pass. Now you're living here—in fairy-tale gorgeousness for a day or two, but you're a simple soul, Anne Harrison, and you long for a wee apartment out in the suburbs, and a kitchenette where you can make goodies for your man."

"You darling!"

Jim caught me in his arms. He was all gentleness now—not aflame with the feeling that sometimes terrifies me even while it summons my very soul. He put his hands against my cheeks and cupped my face in their firm strength. I felt suddenly like a child. I wanted to lean against him and sob out my joy in belonging to him—in being his "little Princess Anne." And then, Jim laid his head against my hair, and my hero's voice sounded broken and unsteady.

"I want you to have everything in the world—clothes and a beautiful home and servants to wait on you, little Anne—not a flat and a stuffy kitchenette. I want to give you all the things Sheldon and Dicky buy the women they love—and last night I couldn't even buy you a rag doll. It hurt. It humiliated me. My little Princess Anne, I want you to have everything!"

Reward Enough

I reached up and laid my hand against Jim's hair. I wasn't the child now—but a mother comforting her boy.

"Dear—dear lad, I have—you!" I whispered.

Jim was silent a moment, while I caressed his face and snuggled closer against his heart.

Then he laughed heartily:

"I have twenty-one hundred and a few more hundreds for rent a year, and Dicky Royce spends more than that on Sally in a week."

"Perhaps he has everything to give Sally but what she wants—love like ours, dear. Jim, darling—now Jim—don't you see how rich I am, just saying that? You didn't laugh at my terror over—a bee. You weren't angry when I was rude to Mrs. Royce—we have so much happiness and understanding! No one has everything, but we have more than any others I know. Oh, lad, don't you see that you're giving me what I want?"

"You wonderful little girl! My sweetheart—dear!" Jim drew me closer and closer to him—his strength hurt me, but it made me happy.

A moment later he loosed his arms from about me and looked deep into my eyes as he said:

"You want me! You say you have what you want—you think you're rich—O Anne, little Anne, perhaps I never had the right to marry you!"

I pushed myself away wildly staring into his face as I gasped:

"What do you mean? No right! Is there some other"——

I couldn't bring myself even to speak the word, but I was thinking of—Betty Bryce.

Jim stared at me in sheer amazement.

Bringing Up Children

Beatrice Fairfax Gives Some Sensible Advice to Parents

By Beatrice Fairfax

BEFORE the war we women were drowned in leisure. We did not realize it—and of course every one of us will deny it now—but there is abundant proof that, in the words of good old Dr. Watts, Satan found mischief for idle hands to do.

For one thing, we built up an elaborate sex convention in regard to babies' bonnets and other belongings. We felt it was absolutely necessary for a girl baby to have a rosette over each ear; bereft of this the bonnet was without sex and void.

Usually the mischief began right there, over-emphasizing the sex question while children were still in their baby carriages. With their first conscious breaths girl babies were inspired to be "refined," while boy babies were entreated to be "brave," and take their castor oil like a man.

Unconsciously each of these small unfortunates began storing up impressions that later on meant a ball and chain on their heels. Mary felt she must be refined and a little lady—and to get her clothes dirty or her hair rumpled was to break all the commandments at once.

And John was equally well outfitted with a set of false standards that promised to be as useful to him through life as a millstone in swimming. It wasn't necessary for him to be thoughtful, tactful or kind to things weaker than himself, because these things might convert him into a "sissy."

If he played with girls, or occasionally combed his hair, or stroked a cat, these things were dangerous manifestations of possible sissyhood. And John uprose, did a war dance, and made life hideous for every one concerned, not because he enjoyed it especially, but to conform to the approved manly ideal.

Questions of sex loom on the horizon soon enough and vast enough, in all conscience, without anticipating them with ribbons and sentiments that might well be placed on the non-essential list.

It is a liberal and indulgent mother who will consent to her daughter playing blind man's buff. I spy, or prisoner's base anywhere within earshot of the house. These games come under the head of romping, which is supposed to be as deplorable for Mary's manners as for her clothes, not to mention the poise, which is hard on "grown-ups."

The consequence was that if Mary was a young person with her full share of animal spirits she was obliged to do a bit of sneaking now and then, or indulge in sedentary games.

These may have saved her clothes and the nerves of her relatives, but they were bad for Mary's muscles and nerves. The former were apt to be under-developed, and the latter over-developed. John had too much savagery. Mary not enough. And all on account of that unduly anticipated bugbear, sex, which should have been as much ignored as possible in the interest of both children.

There comes a day, and every mother recognizes its advent, when John with no urging at all, will soap his ears and begin to cultivate a pompadour—the latter is an unfailing symptom and always spells Girl. And there is nothing to be done about it but to inaugurate a policy of "watchful waiting" with a great deal of sympathy on the side.

NIG gave vent to a mixture between a yelp and a bark. At the sound Amos Chapin appeared in the door leading to the dining-room.

"Take that dog away!" he began. But at his first word, Talak disappeared around the corner of the house.

Not so the dog. He stood on the mat, growling, his eyes on the man whose dislike for him he seemed to understand.

"Perhaps he is hungry—as Talak suggested," Elizabeth ventured.

"Then Talak should have fed him when he had his own breakfast two hours ago," the farmer asserted. "He's too soft with that dog—wants him to have meat and such things as we eat. I won't have the beast coming here."

Striding across the floor, he pushed across the screen-door to open it. As he did so, the huge dog sprang against the wire screening, his weight tearing it loose on one side.

With a muttered oath, Amos rushed out of the kitchen by the door opening upon the side-porch, and, to the dog's surprise, appeared a second later upon the back steps.

He Shoots the Dog

"Get out of here, you brute!" the farmer exclaimed.

The dog showed his teeth, crouching as if to spring.

On the little porch at the head of the steps stood Amos Chapin's loaded shot-gun.

An evil light in the dog's eyes now startled him as he approached him. He would stand no nonsense from this dirty beast.

The torn screen-door added to Amos Chapin's anger. That would mean more money out of his pocket. His pocket-nerve was extremely sensitive.

"Get out of here!" he roared, again, seizing the gun and pointing it at the animal.

With a howl of rage, the dog sprang straight at him. And as he did so, Amos pulled the trigger of the shot-gun.

The huge body leaped fully a foot in the air, then fell over on its side and rolled heavily down the steps. For an instant it twitched, then lay still.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

"O Pa!"

The ejaculation was Mrs. Chapin's. She stood at the screen door, her face white, her hand trembling.

"O Pa," she repeated as her husband made no response.

He was gazing at the dog, where it lay right across the path at his feet.

At the reiterated appeal, Amos looked up impatiently, flushing with anger.

"Well, what of it?" he challenged, "If a dog attacks me I have a right to defend myself, haven't I?"

John Butler, hearing the shot, had come out of the house by the front door and now spoke. Until then Amos had not known that he was at his side.

"You could have hit the dog over the head with the butt of the gun," he remarked. "You would not have killed him then, for he is certainly stone dead."

"Perhaps he is hungry—as Talak suggested," Elizabeth ventured.

"Then Talak should have fed him when he had his own breakfast two hours ago," the farmer asserted.

"He's too soft with that dog—wants him to have meat and such things as we eat. I won't have the beast coming here."

About Drying Fruits

By Ellen I. Kelley

(Director Department of Household Science, National War Garden Commission)

IF you are a novice in drying vegetables and fruits, begin with a small quantity of some one product. Have it very fresh, and prepare according to directions. As a general rule, products to be dried are cut into slices or shreds with the skin removed. Sharp knives, a good board and a vegetable and fruit slicer are needed implements.

In using artificial heat be careful to start at a comparatively low temperature and gradually increase it. One hundred and ten degrees Fahrenheit as a minimum to 150 degrees Fahrenheit maximum is a practical general rule. Oven thermometers are almost indispensable for reliable work.

The actual time for drying cannot be given; it varies with atmospheric conditions, apparatus, and judgment exercised by person in charge. A little experience will make it easy to determine when products are sufficiently dried.

Fruits should be rather leathery and pliable, but no moisture should come to the surface when pressed.

Vegetables should appear slightly more dry, but should not snap or crackle. Berries are dry enough if they stick to the hand but do not crush when squeezed. If dried too hard, fruits and vegetables will not resume their natural shape when cooked.

A Good Thing to Know

When you are sending a parcel to your boy at the front, put in a pinch of rock ammonia. When this is moistened and rubbed on insect bites, it practically stops the irritation.

WALK ERECT AT EIGHTY

Because a man or woman is old does not mean that they must walk bent over and supported with a cane. A man can be as vigorous and healthy at eighty as at twenty if he aids the organs of the body in performing their functions.

All diseases whether of a malignant or weak character tend to tear away your vitality. You must counteract your sickness in its incipient stage if you would live a happy and useful long life.

Lemon Juice For Freckles

Girls! Make beauty lotion at home for a few cents. Try it!

Squeeze the juice of two lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white, shake well, and you have a quarter pint of the best freckle and tan lotion, and complexion beautifier, at very, very small cost.

Your grocer has the lemons and any drug store or toilet counter will supply three ounces of orchard white for a few cents. Massage this sweetly fragrant lotion into the face, neck, arms and hands each day and see how freckles and blemishes disappear and how clear, soft and white the skin becomes. Yes! It is harmless.—Advertisement.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Try this method of making a little fruit go a long way—a boon in these days of scarcity. Boil half a pound of rice in plenty of water, to which is added the juice of half a lemon and a pint of salt.

Drain the rice, and with a small quantity line a pudding basin. Then add a little uncooked fruit, either gooseberries, rhubarb, loganberries, currants, etc. Place on this a further layer of rice, and then a second layer of fruit. By this time your basin is nearly filled, a third of rice completing the top layer. Sweeten the whole with honey, sugar or syrup, cover with a greased paper and steam for one hour and a half.

* * *

Always make a point of a flowing plenty of time for the juices of a fruit salad to blend together well. This is the whole secret of a really refreshing fruit dish.

* * *

A few pieces of bacon rind added to the water in which cabbage is boiled improves the flavor of the vegetable.

* * *

Peeling onions is never a pleasant job. They will not make your eyes smart nearly so much, however, if they are peeled from the root upwards.

A Thrilling Story of an American Girl and German Intrigue in This Country

He looked a little wistfully from one to the other. Antagonism and dislike were written in their faces. Even Pamela, who was skilled in the art of subterfuge, made little effort to conceal her aversion. Nevertheless, he continued doggedly.

"What does it matter," he demanded, "who handles this formula—you or I? Our faces are turned in the same direction. There is this difference only with me. I want to make it the basis of a kindlier feeling in Washington towards my father's country."

Pamela's eyebrows were raised.

"Are you sure," she asked, "that the formula itself would not find its way into your father's country?"

"As to that I pledge my word," he replied. "I am an American citizen."

"Looks like it, doesn't he!" Van Teyl jeered.

"Tell us what you have been doing in Berlin, then?" Pamela inquired.

"I had a definite mission there," Fischer assured them, "which I hope to bring to a definite conclusion. If you are an American citizen in the broadest sense of the word, England is no more to you than Germany. I want to place before some responsible person in the American government, a proposal—an official proposal—the acceptance of which will be in years to come of immense benefit to her."

"And the quid pro quo?" Pamela asked gently.

Not There to Tell

"I am not here for the purpose of gratifying curiosity," Fischer replied, "but if you will take this matter up seriously, you shall be the person through whom this proposal shall be brought before the American government. The whole of the negotiations shall be conducted through you. If you succeed, you will be known throughout history as the woman who saved America from her great and growing danger. If you fail, you will be no worse off than you are now."

"And you propose to hand over the conduct of these negotiations to me!" Pamela observed, "in return for what?"

"The pocketbook which you took from Captain Graham."

"So there we are, back again at the commencement of our discussion," Pamela remarked. "Are you going to repeat that you want this formula for Washington and not for Berlin?"

"My first idea," Fischer confessed, "was to hand it over to Germany. I have changed my views. Germany has great explosives of her own. This formula shall be used in a different fashion. It shall be a lever in the coming negotiations between America and Germany."

"We have had a great deal of conversation to no practical purpose," Pamela declared. "Why are you so sure that I have the formula?"

Fischer frowned slightly. He had recovered himself now, and his tone was as steady and quiet as ever. Only occasionally his eyes wandered to where James Van Teyl was fidgetting about the table, and at such times his fingers tightened upon the stock of his revolver.

Accused Her

"It is practically certain that you have the papers," he pointed out. "You were the first person to go up the stairs after Graham had been rendered unconscious. Joseph admits that he had been forced to leave him—the orchestra was waiting to play. He was alone in that little room. That you should have known of its existence and his presence there is surprising, but nothing more. Furthermore, I am convinced that you were in some way concerned with his rescue later. You visited Hassan and you visited Joseph. From the latter you procured the key of the chapel. If only he had had the courage to tell the truth—well, we will let that pass. You have the papers, Miss Van Teyl. I am bidding a great price for them. If you are a wise woman, you will not hesitate."

There was a knock at the door. They all three turned towards it. A little hastily, Pamela. Even Pamela and her brother felt the grip of an absorbing problem. To their surprise, it was Lutchester who reappeared upon the threshold. In his hand he held a small sealed packet.

"I'm sorry to disturb you all," he apologized. "I have something here which I believe belongs to you, Miss Van Teyl. I thought I'd better bring it up and explain. From the way your little Japanese friend was holding on to it, I thought it might be important. It is a little torn, but that isn't my fault."

He held it out to Pamela. It was a long packet torn open at one end. From it was protruding a worn, brown pocketbook. Pamela's hand closed upon it mechanically. There was a dazed look in her eyes. Fischer's fingers stole once more towards the pocket into which, at Lutchester's entrance, he had slipped his revolver.

SENATOR JAMES OF KENTUCKY DEAD

By International News Service.

Baltimore, Aug. 28.—Senator Ollie M. James of Kentucky, who has been a patient at Johns Hopkins Hospital, in this city, for several months, suffering from a general nervous breakdown and other ailments, died at 6.55 o'clock this morning.

In the last week the condition of the noted Kentucky statesman took a decided turn for the worse, and only his great vitality kept him alive so long.

When the end came, Mrs. James was at the bedside of her husband, as was also a brother, Edward James.

NATIVE SON.

Senator James was a native of Kentucky, born in Crittenden County in 1871. He was a member of the fifty-eighth, fifty-ninth, sixtieth and sixty-first Congress, and was re-elected to the sixty-second when he was nominated and elected to succeed Senator Paynter for the six-year term, beginning March 14, 1913.

Ollie M. James was one of the most picturesque and popular members of the United States Senate. Of giant physique and striking personality, he was beloved by Democrats and Republicans alike.

He received his education in the common and academic schools of the county and took up the study of law with his father, L. H. James, and was admitted to the bar when twenty years old. From boyhood he was keenly interested in politics and at the age of sixteen served as a page in the Kentucky Legislature.

Senator James first attracted attention in the legal profession when he was one of the attorneys for Governor Gobel in his celebrated contest for Kentucky's gubernatorial chair.

STAUNCH WILSON MAN.

Senator James always was a staunch defender of the Wilson administration against the attacks of its opponents. His last speech in the Senate was one in which he defended the administration's conduct of the war against the criticisms of Senator Chamberlain and other members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee. It was in this speech he described the President as "Walking a tightrope over a sea of blood," "Don't shake the rope," he warned. This saying has been much quoted since.

Senator James was the eleventh Senator to die during the Sixty-Fifth Congress.

Lexington, Aug. 28.—Governor A. Owsley Stanley will succeed Senator Ollie James, it was announced today. He will have more than a year to serve before James' term expires.

President Wilson Sends Condolence to Senator's Widow

Washington, Aug. 28.—President Wilson this afternoon sent the following letter to Senator James' widow:

"It is with deep and genuine grief that I hear of the death of your distinguished husband. He had won the affection of everybody who really knew his quality and I was proud to count myself among his closest friends.

"His loss is a very great one to me personally, the great party which he served and to the country which in common with the rest of us he loved, and to which he sought to give his best.

"With warmest sympathy,

"Cordially and sincerely yours,

"WOODROW WILSON."

James P. Tumulty, private secretary to the President, will attend the funeral as the personal representative of the Chief Executive, it was announced at the White House today.

Resolutions were adopted in both Houses of Congress and adjournment taken out of respect to the dead. In the Senate a committee was named to attend the funeral. It was:

Senators Beckham, Simmons, Williams, Smith of Arizona; Pomerene, Thornton, Penrose, Frederick, Penrose, Borah, Weeks, Kenyon, Fall, Curtis and Harding.

Clause to Settle Strikes Passed by Senate

Washington, Aug. 28.—The "work or fight" clause as added to the man power bill by the Senate, which passed the amended measure, follows:

"That when any persons shall have been placed in a deferred or exempted class for any of the reasons in this paragraph set forth he shall not be entitled to remain therein unless he shall in good faith continue, while physically able so to do, to work at and follow such occupation, employment or business, and if he fails so to do, he shall again become subject to the draft. The President shall make regulations for enforcing this provision.

"This proviso shall not apply in the case of a strike if the strikers have submitted or will at once submit the dispute to the War Labor Board, agree to abide and do abide by its decision and do at once resume work pending such decision. The said board shall take up and decide at such disputes as speedily as practicable."

NEW DRAFT BILL PASSES SENATE UNANIMOUSLY

Washington, Aug. 28.—The man-power bill, extending the draft age to eighteen to forty-five, both inclusive, passed the Senate without a dissenting vote.

The bill as it passed the Senate contains the anti-strike or work or fight provision, but with some of its teeth drawn. Senator Cummins of Iowa proposed and the Senate adopted a modifying amendment which will protect strikers in their deferred classification if they will submit their grievances to the National War Labor Board and agree to abide by its decision.

The first sharp fight came over the adoption of the anti-strike, work or fight amendment. The provision had been freely debated since the introduction of the bill. Senator McKellar of Tennessee, moved to strike it from the bill. His motion was defeated by a vote of 29 to 49.

TWO YEARS FOR WOMAN TAKEN IN VICE CRUSADE

As a result of the vice crusade in this city Annie Wilson of Sussex street, in the Roxbury district, was sentenced today by Judge Hitchcock in the Superior Court to two years in the House of Correction. The military authorities at Camp Devens brought the attention of the police to the Wilson house. Sergeant Byrne and other officers of Division 10 watched the place one night and saw many soldiers go into the house. One of the witnesses was a young girl employed in a public building. She said she was induced to go to the house on the assurance she would meet her sweetheart, a soldier, but found that she had been deceived. She testified that while there she saw several soldiers.

Washington, Aug. 28.—Germany will compensate Norway for vessels sunk "without warning and outside the danger zone, if it can be proved that they were sunk without warning," according to official diplomatic advices reaching here this afternoon telling of the Teuton reply to the Norwegian protest. The Norwegian press is demanding that German ships be seized for every vessel sunk without warning, and considerable pecuniary compensation be demanded for families of sailors.

OFFICERS' UNIFORMS STOLEN BY BURGLARS

FOE ATTEMPTS TO SHOW WAR PICTURES IN U. S.

Washington, Aug. 28.—Exploitation of still and motion pictures of enemy origin is constantly being attempted by certain interests, the Military Intelligence Department has learned, and the chief military censor today called upon the public to help stamp out this form of German propaganda.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

There is class concentrated in the shortstops, who still have a chance at the pennant, and, shoving over the lists of the three clubs, it would seem that the war demands have dealt more leniently with the shortstops than they have with players in any other position.

All three of these great shortstops are waiting for the summons to duty, and it is probable that two at least would be at their posts now but for the chance of playing in the big series.

The astounding part of the dope is that this kid Hollocher, a first-year man, shows in the figures as the equal of the great Scott, and, in some points, the superior of both Scott and Chapman, who have, with Peckinpaugh, been rated as the premier shortstops.

There probably will be some protest in many cities over the high rating of a youngster, who never has been under fire in a big series, against a cool, fighting and unterrified man like Scott.

Comparing these two players is like comparing fire and water. Scott is, I believe, the coolest cucumber in the patch. He is not a good hitter, but in a series like this he becomes dangerous because he has what we call the "gambler's nerve," and the better the position the greater the strain, the more apt he is to come through.

In defensive work he is one of the greatest shortfielders the game ever has known, with a pair of hands the like of which has not been seen since Lee Tannehill dropped back. Scott is practically unbeatable, the savior of his team in times of panic and a follower more likely to hit in a pinch than he is when the bags are full.

Contrast him with Hollocher, a hustling, aggressive, superbly confident, without a shell behind him, and, in the matter of covering ground, he can beat Scott. He throws from any position, goes to both directions, and he is so wonderfully certain of himself that he will take a lot to smash his nerve and bring on a panic.

Tomorrow we will study the third baseman—and then get to the catchers and pitchers, where the points of difference are more vital.

What if you are a Millionaire

I DON'T care how much money you've got, you can't afford to spend more than is necessary to get what you need. Secretary of the Treasury, McAdoo, expressed my sentiments when he said the other day in New York:

"I have no patience with the spendthrift today because the Nation is in need of every dollar it can get. The man who hangs on to his dollar regardless of what the other man may say, is the man who is helping to win the war—and is doing almost as much for his country as the man in uniform."

INDIANS AGAIN THREATENING THE RED SOX

By NICK FLATLEY.

Just what American League team will play the victorious Chicago Cubs in the ante-windup 1918 World's Series still rests with the gods. The pertinacious Cleveland Indians are now only two and one-half games away from the front, and the leading Red Sox cannot seem to win consistently.

Both teams have some seven games ahead. Ordinarily it would be easy for a leading outfit to come through on a two and one-half lead basis, but this is an unusual year. The Tigers, easy prey heretofore, have won two in a row.

Joe Bush was beaten, 2 to 1, yesterday, by Kallio, though Bullet Joseph fanned thirteen. Meantime, Cleveland won, and the race is still on.

Three victories in the seven games remaining will just about clinch it, and Sam Jones, who has the habit, was due to appear on the mound this p. m.

TERRY BROOKS IS BESTED BY PAUL DOYLE

By RINGSIDE.

Paul Doyle of New York won practically all the way in his twelve-round bout with Terry Brooks at the Armory A. A. show at the Arena, handing the West End battler a scientific lacing.

Barring the first two chapters, which were rather tame, and the seventh, when Brooks' body blows showed Paul up a bit, Terry didn't have hardly a look-in.

The ninth and tenth rounds were as done for the Boston boy. In the tenth, Doyle shot an clean one to Terry's jaw, flooring him. The New Yorker battered him around, the ropes saving Terry from hitting the canvas a second time.

Joe Rivers and George Robinson, the latter substituting for the Jamaica Kid, put up an unexpectedly fast bout, the latter winning. Referee Larry Cooley's decision was "booed," for the reception wasn't a marker to what Maffie Flaherty got when he called the Dummy Burns-Shaver O'Brien ten-round semi a draw. Burns was entitled to the decision.

Bob Josephs was too fast for Frank Terondo in the six-round opener, Terondo finished stoutly, but Josephs had too big a lead to overcome.

JACKIE WILLIAMS, matchmaker of the Crescent A. C. of Lowell, has offered terms to Soldier Bartfield of Brooklyn, to meet the winner of the Tommy Ronan-Battling Kopin battle Friday night.

PADDY OWENS and Young Montreal of Providence make a swell team as a feature for the re-opening of the Trinity A. C. of Cambridge next Monday night. Montreal has a snappy record, having put the crusher to such good ones as Johnny Russell, Kid Lahoos and Barney Snyder.

CLEVELAND FANS HOPE SOX WILL TOSS IT OFF

Cleveland, Aug. 28.—The second successive defeat of the Red Sox by the Tigers, and the victory of Pohl's Indians in Philadelphia, spells a new rise to the hopes of fans here that part of the World's Series may be played at League Park.

The rough treatment recently accorded the Red Sox by the Tigers is recalled by the fans, as is the fact that Boston is scheduled to play a double-header in New York Labor Day. The Indians will engage the Athletics in another game. Then they go to Chicago and finish with a double bill at St. Louis.

NUNAMAKER SWATS 1,000 WHILE MATES LOSE TWO

Leslie Nunamaker batted at a 1,000 clip in the twin bill the Braves lost to the Phillies in the opener he went up for Wright in the eighth frame and banged out a single. In the afternoon Nunamaker went up six times, poled five safe ones, including a double, and drew a free ticket.

Boston Player Loses Second Round Match to Oriental Star

Forest Hills, L. I., Aug. 28.—Richard Lindley Murray, sensational California star, was not called upon to play in the second round of the National Singles Lawn Tennis Tournament, Lieutenant M. G. M. Kelleher, defaulting to him.

Ralph H. Burdick, Western champion; Fred B. Alexander, Sergeant Harold Throckmorton, Vincent Richards, William T. Tilden, 2d, Ichiya Kumagae, Japanese champion; Walter T. Hayes and S. Howard Voshell were among the winners.

Tilden scored an easy victory over Channing F. Burrows in straight sets, 6—1, 6—3, 6—3. Walter T. Hayes of Chicago, who, last week, took the measure of Kumagae, in the preliminary tournament at Southampton, defeated Edmund H. Hondrickson of Amherst, 6—1, 6—2, 6—3.

Kumagae met George Wightman of Boston, in the second round. The latter manoeuvred to keep the score down in the early games of the first set, but finally gave way under the pressure of the deadly drives of the little Oriental. Steadiness was the key of Kumagae's game and it scored for him.

The feature match of the first round was the battle between Vincent Richards, sixteen-year-old boy, who holds two national titles, and Frank T. Anderson, of the Kings County Lawn Tennis Club. Richards conquered his rival in one of the most spectacular matches of the day, 6—1, 6—3, 6—4.

Voshell defeated Harold D. Breiz of the Yale team, representing the Longwood Cricket Club. Voshell put plenty of sting in his drives adn mastered his opponent with little difficulty, 6—3, 6—0, 6—1.

TWO GALA ENTRIES ON TONIGHT'S REVERE CARD

Manager Nat Butler announces that the three postponed sprint championships and forty-mile team race will be staged at the Revere cycle track tonight.

The team race will show Wiley and Lilart riding against Madonna and Corry.

All four flyers have entered the cycling Derby, which will be run later in the season, and as they are going in top form, some close riding is in store for the fans.

The running of the sprint championships also promises to bring out some hard battling, and, while two of the old favorites are out of the running, having failed to qualify, the "going" should be warm. The amateurs will also have their regular card of events.

STALLINGS PICKS CUBS TO WIN WORLD'S SERIES

"Ed Barrow has done a great job with the Red Sox, but I think the Cubs will win the World's Series," so states George Stallings, Braves' pilot, who is spending a day in Boston and will rejoin his warriors in Philadelphia tomorrow. "Barrow has covered his weak spots in great shape and is to be congratulated for being out in front.

"However, 'Mitch' has a strong, fast team; plenty of hitters and four good pitchers in Tyler, Vaughn, Hendrix and Douglas."

POP GEERS DAY AT READVILLE; SPICY CARD

St. Frisco, Mabel Trask and Miss Bertha Dillon Hook Up—Purse Money Totals $16,000

GUS DALY'S SELECTIONS. AT READVILLE.

Three-year-old trot, American Horse Breeder Futurity, value 7,029—Chestnut Peter, Peter Vonin, Peter June.

2:10 trot, the Massachusetts, value $5,000—June Bird, Chiltoot, North Spur.

2:11 pace, the Pilgrim, value $3,000—Oro Fino, Cox entry, Nay Bird.

Free-for-all trot, purse $1,000—St. Frisco, Miss Bertha Dillon, Mabel Frask.

Most probable winner—ORO FINO.

By GUS DALY.

All New England, that is, thousands of this section's lovers of the harness racing game, is to honor Edward (Pop) Geers, daddy of all drivers, at the Readville race course this afternoon.

A program par excellence is offered, with $16,000 in stakes and purses being distributed to the equine speedsters.

The American Horse Breeder Futurity, for three-year-old trotters, with a value of $7,029, looks like an easy win for Chestnut Peter, the high priced youngster recently purchased by C. W. Leonard of Boston.

Peter Vonin, another Boston owned trotter, the property of G. H. Tralser, should grab off second honors, while third money is the best I can see for "Pop" Geers, who will drive Peter June.

GEERS' ENTRY FAVORED.

The second event is the Massachusetts for 2:10 trotters, worth $5,000. They have not beaten June Bird this season, and look to have a look to Geers raise his hat at the finish in acknowledgment of a well-earned victory.

Tommy Murphy, with Chilicoot, and "Long Shot" Cox, with North Star, will have a little royal fun second and third honors. I like them as named.

The Pilgrim, 2:11 pace, value $3,000, has a fine bunch of triggers carded to race. Oro Fino, Nay Bird, Cox entry, looks like the surest winner of the week.

Walter Cox's entry, Game of Chance and Frank Dewey, whichever elects to go, should secure second honors, with the Boston mare, May Bird, third.

CRACK TRIO TO MEET.

The free-for-all trot has been moved up one day in honor of the occasion. It brings together three of the fastest trotters in the country, St. Frisco, Mabel Trask and Miss Bertha Dillon.

There will be scarcely a foot's difference between the first two. Still, I am with those who believe Mabel Trask with the wind ahead of Mabel Trask with Miss Bertha Dillon.

Over 10,000 people attended yesterday's matinee. The American Horse Breeder Futurity for three-year-old pacers and trot took starters. Edna Early and Peter Elliott.

Silver Kiss annexed the Justin Edwards for 2:14 pacers, hanging up a track record of 2:03¼.

Private Railroad Control Again Condemned

McAdoo's Announcement of Electrification Shows Up Enormous Waste Under the Old System

Director-General McAdoo announces that if the government operation of the railroads becomes permanent one of the first steps will be the electrification of these great instruments of transportation.

Think of what that means to the people who travel upon these railroads in the heat of the Summer! Think of what it means in the saving of coal and other economies! Think how the possibility of that great change condemns the old private management! Money enough has been wasted in the last ten years by the Wall Street private management of the New Haven Railroad to electrify that system from end to end. Enough has been wasted even on the staid old Boston & Maine, from the time of its absorption of the Eastern Railroad to its own absorption by the empire-building New Haven, to electrify the Boston & Maine system also; but the old private managers preferred to steal the money, or to permit express companies and private stock gambling cabals in Wall Street to steal the money, to build up great private fortunes at the expense of those who either use the railroads to travel upon or who have to pay the extra freight charges in the price they pay for nearly everything that they buy.

Mr. Henry I. Harriman, president of the Chamber of Commerce and president of one of the big electric power producing companies of New England, speaking before the City Club a while ago, said that the electrification of the railroads throughout the nation would save millions of tons of coal every year. The old private managers of the railroads knew this just as well as the government knows it and as Mr. Harriman knows it, but they were very much more interested in manipulating railroad stocks, in controlling Congress and the State Legislatures, in using for their selfish purposes district attorneys, judges, city councils and mayors, and in getting rake-offs on the purchase of cars, of rails, and of all other materials which railroads purchased by the hundreds of millions of dollars' worth every year. Their first lookout was for themselves. Their second was for the little coteries of bankers who exercised an effective control of the stock. Their third consideration was for their stockholders, and their last consideration of all was for the public. Generally, indeed, the stockholders and public were lumped in together, and like the dogs under the table of Dives came in only for the crumbs that could not conveniently be gorged by the feasters at the board.

It has just been announced that in the first year of government operation the government has saved more than twenty-one million dollars in overhead charges alone in the annual expense of operating the railroads. The government has also put out of business the army of lobbyists which has infested our State capitols, the halls of Congress, the executive chambers of our Governors, our city halls, the lobbies of our district attorneys, and the social clubs where our judges dine—everywhere busy undermining the safety of democracy in America.

These are fine beginnings, and more than justify the course of President Wilson in recommending, and Congress in authorising, the taking over of the railroads as a single system under public operation and control. This last announcement of Director-General McAdoo is a forcible reminder of how much better still, and wiser still, it would have been to take over the lines under national ownership once and for all, so that the American people might have begun to enjoy at the earliest possible moment the great economies and incalculable increase in comfort and efficiency of railroad electrification, instead of having to wait an indefinite number of years longer for benefits of which they have already been deprived for nearly a generation by the short-sighted greed of private railroad ownership and operation.

Sir Edward Carson's Share in Causing the War

The future historian will probably find much to indorse in "Tay Pay" O'Connor's charge that the burden of responsibility for this war rests very heavily upon the shoulders of Sir Edward Carson.

Though the fundamental causes of the war lie much deeper, and the long-dreaded conflagration might in any event have broken out soon or late, there is no reasonable doubt that Carson's threat of armed rebellion against the adoption of home rule and the British government's supine submission to his treasonable attitude, taken in connection with the astounding state of military unpreparedness disclosed by the Boer war, had much to do with the decision of the German autocracy that "the day" for striking the decisive blow and snatching the world mastery for which Germany had so long and thoroughly prepared had come at last.

The Russo-Japanese war had proved the rottenness of the military power of Russia, and with the arm of Great Britain apparently paralyzed by the threat of civil war the mistaken prognosis of the Kaiser and his military advisers is not surprising. Indeed, it can hardly be called a mistake, for it is much to be doubted if a conjuncture of circumstances so favorable to the prospects of the extension of the rule of the Hohenzollerns over the whole civilized world would ever have occurred again.

Of course, Sir Edward Carson was not and is not consciously pro-German. Since the war broke out he has undoubtedly done what he could to promote the success of the allies. His costly and inexcusable fault lay in preferring the selfish interests of the little aristocratic and plutocratic coterie of which he was the temporary head to the welfare and safety of his country.

Our own war profiteers, and the band of reactionary Republicans who, by a filibuster in the United States Senate under the lead of Senator Weeks, set back our shipbuilding program for two full years, and who after we entered into the war continued as long as they dared to undermine the confidence of the nation in the efficiency of the war administration, and to convince Germany that we would prove a contemptible foe, are very like him in their motives, and not far behind in treasonable folly.

MRS. WILSON WOODROW'S ARTICLE

Ashamed to Appear Ignorant, Many People Fib About Perfectly Simple and Immaterial Matters; or They Squirm and Hedge and Camouflage Their Answers

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

THERE are people who would rather be convicted of any one of the seven deadly sins than to confess their justifiable ignorance of some perfectly simple and immaterial matter.

That is partly the reason there is so much wrong information in the world.

If I wanted to go to one of the suburbs of New York and were to inquire my way of the first half dozen men I should meet the chances are that I would get exactly six totally different answers, and none of them correct.

Each of the half dozen, instead of frankly replying, "I don't know," would stare at me fishy-eyed for a moment or two and then stammer: "The way to Suburbia? Why, let me see. Oh, yes; you go such and such a way," giving succinct directions, which, if followed, would land one almost anywhere from Pawtucket to Peoria.

Not to Mislead

And it is not from any conscious intention to mislead the inquirer. In fact, they rather hope they may be right. But, ashamed to appear ignorant, they are willing to take a gambler's chance at your expense.

I will give you another experiment of the same character. Mention some book, play, picture, newspaper article or prominent personage to any five people of your acquaintance, and, although they may all be absolutely unfamiliar with the subject you bring up, it will be a very exceptional individual who admits it. They may not openly fib, but they will so hedge and squirm and camouflage their rejoinders as to give all the effects of a barefaced deception.

With the great majority of us a seared conscience is far easier to bear than the mortification of avowing our ignorance. Lecturers and talkers—especially those who are the mouthpiece of some cult—constantly trade upon this weakness in human nature.

"You remember, of course, what Propertius says," they coo, and their auditors nod knowingly, although it is probably the first time they ever heard of Propertius in their lives, and no one outside of a dry-as-dust bookworm could possibly be expected to remember any statement he ever voiced.

But it is in the fields of folly that this dread of betraying ignorance reaches its rankest growth. The sternest-souled and most blameless Roman matron is flattered at being accused as a flirt. She will bridle and slant her eyes in the endeavor to appear subtle even while she denies the imputation. Never have I known a man who did not claim to be an adept at mixing a mint julep, although he probably did not know a single one of the ingredients required outside of the mint.

The other day in a public conveyance I overheard a discussion between two men on the evils of gambling. Finally, in disgust at some rash statement which was made, one of them exclaimed:

"Why, I don't believe you know what a faro bank looks like."

"Oh, no," replied the other with obvious sarcasm. "Never saw one in all my life."

I was satisfied that he was speaking the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. His appearance and manner and the almost angry protest he made all bore me out. But the impression he sought to convey was that in his gay, young life faro was as common a diversion as prunes for breakfast.

Why do we labor so hard to make people think us worse than we are? We feel that we can afford almost anything better than to appear unsophisticated. We would die rather than be called a "boob." Innocence is the last virtue to which we aspire.

May Be Simple

Yet none of us can know everything and each of us knows some one thing better than anybody else in the world. It may be a very simple, little thing—merely one slant or angle of a certain subject or question. But that is our talent, and instead of cultivating it and prding ourselves upon its possession we will nine times out of ten hide it away in a napkin, while we air the empty bubbles of our pretences.

I have never yet found a man or woman uninteresting when he was talking simply and unaffectedly about the thing he really knew. It is only when they get launched upon their hobbies or fads, or pound the table and grow red in the face over things of which they know little or nothing, that they become bores and nuisances.

And what a tangled web of deception one is lured into by all this pretence! "You are familiar with such and such an author" someone asks and either tacitly or openly you indicate that you are. Then comes the question, "What did you think of the way the heroine acted in his last book," and immediately you are in a bog and have to stumble around frenziedly in the effort to extricate yourself. How much easier simply to admit one's ignorance, and so be in a position to ask questions and possibly gain valuable information.

How much easier! Ah, that to most of us is the hardest thing in the world! We try to make the very skim milk of our knowledge masquerade as cream. We like to have it appear that there is nothing in the heavens above, in the earth beneath or in the waters under the earth or on Broadway—especially on Broadway—that we do not know.

And usually we make a mess of it.

DO YOU KNOW AS MUCH AS THE KIDS?

School will soon begin and that youngster is going to come to you for assistance?

Are you prepared to give the child the aid which it will seek?

Your child thinks you are the greatest man or woman in the world.

Are you going to allow this ideal to be shattered?

Would it not be worth a great deal to you to have the youngster continue to keep this fine opinion of you?

When he asks you for some assistance in a problem and you are unable to give help, the child is going to wonder if you are as great as the father or mother of some other child, who knows how to work the problem in school the next day.

Perhaps you can remember what a surprise, what a disappointment, it was to you when your father or mother was unable to give you some information which you sought.

To be able to help your children is going to require some study on your part, but it should not be a difficult matter for you to assist your youngsters at least in the early years of their school life.

To do so will be worth all the effort it will require.

How Tanks Were Named

Because a fellow of the Royal Historical Society has unintentionally misled the British public as to the origin of the famous "tanks," Sir William Tritton, who designed and built them, has published the real story of their name, says the Popular Science Monthly. It seems that in the early days of the war, Sir William Tritton's firm made some tractors for hauling heavy howitzers. Admiral Bacon, then Managing Director of the Coventry Ordnance Works, expressed regret that they would not cross trenches. That made Sir William think.

He thought with such success that he produced a tractor known as "Little Willie." Since it was obviously inadvisable to herald "Little Willie's" reason for existence to the world, he was known as the "Instructional Demonstration Unit." "Little Willie's" hull was called in the shop orders a "water carrier for Mesopotamia;" no one knew that the hull was intended to be mounted on a truck. Naturally, the water carrier began to be called a "tank." So the name came to be used by managers and foremen of the shop, until now it has a place in the army vocabulary and will probably be so known in history for all time.

LETTERS OF LONELY GIRLS HELP

By Winifred Black

I OFTEN get letters from lonely girls. From city and country they come, these messages from young creatures who are just getting their first trial in this world, where there is so much of joy and sorrow.

Sometimes these lonely writers live at home, but in homeless kinds of homes, it seems to me, where there is little sympathy between mother and child, or sisters and brothers.

Upon Your Own Feet

But the real loneliness that I can understand is told by the young girls who work in cities or towns, and lodge in small, bare rooms, with no friendly faces to light up in welcome when they come home from a hard day's work in office or shop or store.

Courage, little sisters. I would say to you all. First, in a time which drones and "slackers" are a great burden on the burdened world, you are taking care of yourself, and so relieving part of today's heavy problem.

Often you are helping some one else, your mother, or the younger children of the family, and that is something more to be proud of. Stand up straight, little sister. You can look the whole world in the face, for you are firm upon your own feet and asking no one for food, shelter or raiment in these days when millions have to be assisted, and by strangers across the seas from them.

And then, dear little sister, as to loneliness, you will soon find a way to conquer that.

You remember the old verse:

"Look up and not down,
Look out and not in,
Lend a hand."

Look around you in the places where you work, and where you live. You will see persons whose lives you can brighten, even by a smile.

There's the old lady in the next room to yours. Her daughters are all married or gone from her, and her kindly face is sad and almost hopeless. You can give her a minute or two of live interest each day, and her return to you will be something you'll wonder at.

The little clerk in the store, who has just come to town, a stranger. She is too poor to wear mourning, but you can see that she is in sorrow. She'll tell you, at the first kind look you give her, that her mother is dead. Such a good mother—and with the few words between you there will be a lightening of your loneliness.

Everywhere in the world is loneliness, in palace and in prison, in cottage, and in crowded hotels most of all. But everywhere, too, are tender hearts waiting for friendly helpfulness. And friendly helpfulness brings speedy relief to the heart that sends it.

Look Out, Not In

You are working hard, little sister, and that is much. Take comfort in doing your work well, however monotonous it may be. Something better may come.

And look up, not down. Look up in confidence and hope and good cheer. Look out, not in. Brooding over one's lot never did good to any one, only harm. Think of yourself just enough to keep clean of soul and body, and then look out at the men and women and children around you. No one can look long without seeing some little thing to be done for some one. Don't think you must have money to help the poor around you. Give of yourself—a smile and a happy word to the old—a story to a tired, half-sick child, an hour's stay to "mind the children" some evening, while a weary mother takes a breath of free air outside. All these little things you can see to do if you only "look out and not in"—and they will help you. Try it, and you won't be lonely!

PREDICTED FAILURE OF AIR CRAFT

By Garrett P. Serviss

LOOKING among my books today I came upon one written by one of the greatest of American mathematicians (he is dead now), and introduced by a preface from his own hand dated "June, 1906," one of whose chapters is headed. "The Outlook for the Flying Machine."

I had just been reading an account of the aviator who, a few days ago, flew under all the East River bridges one after another with the ease, and more than the speed, of a gull, swiftly following the bends of the river, rising gracefully between the bridges and dipping smoothly downward to go under them as fast as they were successively approached; and, with this fresh in mind I could not avoid a certain amazement over what I found to have been this great mathematician's views about the possibilities, or, as he seemed to regard them, impossibilities, of the flying machine.

In Same Year

The fact that in the very year in which the preface of his book was written Santo Dumont, with a machine driven by a petrol motor, made a flight of more than half a mile, and that only two years later, in 1908, Wilbur Wright made a continuous flight of nearly fifty-six miles, together with the marvels that we have all seen accomplished since war began in 1914, give to the statements of the author of the book an interest of a kind which he certainly never suspected that they would possess and at the same time tend to vindicate the inventors, whose intuition and perseverance have a way sometimes of upsetting the academic calculations of the gowns-men.

The writer in question seemed to find much to discourage expectation of the success of flying machines in the fact that the bird "operates by the application of a kind of force which is peculiar to the animal creation, and no approach to which has ever been made by any mechanism. We cannot have muscles or nerves for our flying machines. We have to replace them by such crude and clumsy adjuncts as steam engines and electric batteries."

He indicates plainly that in his opinion mechanical flight cannot succeed until man has found a substitute for a nerve-controlled muscle, and as to that he remarks: "We do not see the dawn of an age in which such a result will be brought forth." A little farther on he declares: "It is quite clear to me that success must await progress of a different kind from that which the inventors of flying machines are aiming at. We want a great discovery, not a great invention."

Not a Discovery

And yet, as we all know, it was not a great discovery, but a great invention, or the combination of a series of inventions, making no new kind of progress, but progress exactly along the line already pursued that astonished the world with a complete success for the airship, only two years after the publication of the statement above quoted, which came from a man of so high a scientific reputation that few would have ventured to oppose his views.

When I sat down to write I hesitated to mention the name of the great man who failed so utterly to foresee a nearby triumph of "practical science," because I had, and have, so profound a respect for the great work that he did in his own line of pure science; but, upon reflection, I have concluded that his reputation cannot be injured because his intuition was faulty. It was Professor Simon Newcomb, and the great Lord Kelvin shared his views.
